Zeppelin Heads North to Fly Over England

TRIO CONFESSES FOUR HOLDUPS

Today

Looking West and East.
Baby Alligator Reply.
Talking From the Clouds.
Tests for Genius.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

SAN SIMEON, Cal., Aug. 8.

THIS W. R. Hearst ranch, running 50 miles along the Pacific, and back over two mountain ranges, contains 240,000 acres, and it is too small to be seen on a fairly big mercator projection. It's a big world.

Going west in a straight line over the Pacific, you would land at Yokohama, and find the intelligent Japanese building fast cruisers, and smiling politely.

GOING east across this continent, and out on the Atlantic, you would overtake the Zeppelin, bound east on a trip around the world. At this time, 7:15 p. m., Eastern standard, the giant dirigible is about 800 miles east of New York.

W. R. HEARST, whose enterprise and generosity made the round-the-world trip possible, gets frequent wireless messages here, giving news of the flight.

IT IS a progressive age, enabling a man to send an airship on such an errand, and receiving hourly reports from men in the clouds, thousands of miles away.

TWENTY-TWO passengers, a crew of 40, a dog and a baby alligator make up the Zeppelin crew.

Why, you ask, should the dog and the alligator make the trip, since they cannot possibly know where they are going?

THE baby alligator might reply, "Why are all you humans making your trip on the flying, whirling earth? You don't know where you are going, either."

WIEGAND'S wireless copy, lying beside this typewriter, at the edge of the Pacific, tells about breakfast and about passing, at 72 miles an hour, the British ship Tacticia, making 19 miles an hour.

Tacticia blows her siren, and fades out of sight.

LADY DRUMMOND HAY, whose wireless letters you will read, is up first, among passengers. Women have energy, when they are interested. Read Euripides' "The Bacchae," and learn that men are nothing compared with women—when excited.

A GRAY haired, middle aged German, Dr. Eckener, handles the controls, when his ship meets "a wall of wind," or other trouble. He is the intellect of the ship. The passengers and crew are his freight and depend for safety on him.

Germany may well be proud of such a man. And this country may be glad that an American made the voyage possible.

CHARLES A. BRUNISSEN, who won second place in the Edison competition for "smartest American boys," says the test questions were foolish, particularly the question, "How would you move a heavy boulder if you were alone on a desert island without tools?"

THE smartest boy, if they found him, might reply that on a desert island, without tools, he would not bother with heavy boulders. All test questions are more or less foolish in themselves. But they enable intelligent men to form an opinion of young intellects.

NO TEST questions could have brought out Edison's ability. He was to make his reputation by answering questions that had never even been formulated.

How to transform flashing lightning into permanent steady light, how to make more than one electrical message travel simultaneously over the same wire, how to print the human voice on wax or metal, and make the surface impressed repeat the human talk.

SUCH are questions that genius answers. You cannot invent the questions, much less the answers. And some silent boy, unnoticed, unable, as Edison would have been unable to answer made up test questions, is the boy that will succeed Edison.

HE MAY be sitting at your own table and called the dull boy of the family. Newton, who seemed a dull boy, could have won no Edison competition. And he had 10 times the intellect of Edison, or any man alive.

NEW YORK sends word that the Federal Reserve Bank has raised the discount rate to 6 per cent. That will make the little speculators shiver, and give the big fellows that waited too long a chance to get in.

BROKERS' loans went above six billions, breaking records. The Federal Reserve, organized to prevent panics, meets the situation by doing what it can to create a panic.

MONEY lenders will increase interest rates, and the little fools will be squeezed.

In France, money is lent at 4 per cent. Ours is the land of usury.

IN THE autumn, Ethel Barrymore will appear in a new play, her daughter acting with her. It is easy to imagine the intense satisfaction that this will give to the talented young girl's brilliant mother.

It interests, especially, those that saw Ethel Barrymore when she appeared in "Captain Jinks," only a few years ago.

ETHEL BARRYMORE'S daughter will represent the fourth successive generation of brilliant actors in one family, beginning with her great-grandmother, Mrs. Drew.

Such inheritance of talent is rare. Nature's plan seems to be to keep leveling off success, and make each generation begin again.

YOU remember Fia Fillipo Lippi and his brilliant son; Pitt, buried with his father, in the same tomb, in Westminster Abbey, Alexander following and eclipsing his father, Phillip.

What other instances can you name of inherited ability?

AIRSHIP CHANGES COURSE TO ESCAPE FOG; LONDON GETS MESSAGE

LONDON, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—A message received at Croydon, London's airport, at 3 p. m. (10 a. m. Pittsburgh time), stated that the dirigible Graf Zeppelin was approaching the English coast.

The first announcement from Croydon was followed by a statement that the authorities there were inclined to discount belief that the Zeppelin was very near the English coast. It was stated the message was picked up by the Croydon wireless station, as first announced, but that it might have been a relayed one, as its direct source was not certain.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Messages received from the Graf Zeppelin today indicated that it had changed its course northward when nearing the Azores in order to escape fog banks between the Azores and the Spanish coast.

The altered course would take the dirigible over England.

Two messages reached the Navy Department this morning from the Zeppelin, reporting "All OK" with the big airship. One message was timed at 3 a. m. (Pittsburgh daylight time), and gave the Graf's position as latitude 42 north, longitude 40 west.

The second message, timed at 4 a. m. (Pittsburgh time), gave the ship's position as latitude 42:20 north, longitude 44:40.

Naval officers were somewhat puzzled by the ship's position as given, but said the "OK" indicated all was well with the Graf.

Navy officers estimated the Graf was about 1,300 miles east of Boston at 4 a. m., indicating its commander had changed his course northward.

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND,

Famous Correspondent who will make the Hearst-Zeppelin-Flight-Round-the-World and report the trip exclusively for the Hearst newspapers.

ABOARD GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 9.—Swinging back to the east by south yesterday forenoon, the Graf Zeppelin swerved into a course that by 8 o'clock last night had taken us approximately halfway to the Azores and almost on the identical line which Dr. Eckener had selected for his eastward trip.

At 8 o'clock the navigation officers estimated our official position as latitude 40:35 N., longitude 51:35 W.

The passengers, happy at the end of a perfect day, played a little game of guessing on how much the Graf will beat her own record to Friedrichshafen. That we will lower the time of our October trip now seems certain.

Six o'clock found the Zep 1,000 nautical miles or 1,150 land miles from the Statue of Liberty, following a course just southeast of the steamer lane.

Outstanding Record Seen

William B. Leeds, our millionaire passenger, declared that Zeppelin travel was much more pleasant and comfortable than traveling in an airplane.

Merriam C. Cooper, the last-minute passenger, who has been an air pilot for 12 years, said:

"I have never seen such an unconcerned, easy feeling among a crowd. They do not seem to know that they are in the air."

At 6:30 o'clock (Eastern Standard time), everything was going finely. The music of the Zep's droning motors was the "orchestra" which played while the passengers enjoyed a fine dinner.

The mighty Graf was gently swaying as it raced into the night over the smooth Atlantic toward the end of the first 24 hours of the Hearst-Zeppelin-Round-the-World-Flight. If all days are like the first one, one of the most outstanding chapters in aerial history is assured.

Lady Hay Inspects Ship

Lady Hay, the envy of the romantic-minded feminine world, has again captured the admiration of the entire ship through her poise and gracious manner. She seldom intrudes herself among the men passengers except at meals.

At one time during the day, clad in knickers and leather flying togs, she clambered squirrel-like through the two-block-long "innards" of the Zeppelin, carrying the Boston bulldog and accompanied by Wilkins.

Her semi-evening dress made her a pretty picture at dinner against a background otherwise entirely masculine.

It is difficult to realize that our silver ship racing through the night with the misty clouds over the ocean outstretching their damp hands, is the focus of millions of eyes all over the world.

SNOOK SHOWS JURY HOW HE KILLED GIRL

Prosecutor Acts Co-Ed Role As Doctor Is Compelled To Reproduce Death Scene

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN,
International News Service.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 9.—Spectators at the Snook trial were given a thrill today when Dr. James H. Snook, while under a merciless cross-examination, was forced to demonstrate to the jury how he twisted the arm of Theora Hix, co-ed beauty, just before he reached for a hammer and beat her to death on the night of June 13.

"Show the jury just how you did it," commanded Prosecutor John J. Chester, Jr. "I'll pose as Miss Hix. You just be yourself."

SNOOK SHUDDERS

The prosecutor kneeled before the witness stand.

"Go ahead, grab my wrist, and throw me around," he insisted. "You can't hurt."

Snook recoiled from the suggestion.

"Go ahead, grab the wrist," Chester repeated.

Finally, the defendant seized the prosecutor's left wrist and wrestled him around, almost pushing him over a table. Many spectators gasped.

TELLS OF STRUGGLE

The demonstration came while Snook was being grilled concerning what took place in his parked coupe

Secret Arrests Made in Donohoe Death Mystery

By SHELDON REED,
Staff Correspondent.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Aug. 9.—It was learned from an authentic source today that suspects in the slaying of John Donohoe are in custody and that one of them is a prominent Uniontown resident.

This could not be verified through Maj. Lynn Adams, in charge of the investigation, who adopted the attitude of "nothing to say."

The feverish activity of the manhunt here subsided suddenly after Wednesday, when reports from Maj. Harry Goddard, bullet expert, were received.

PROBE IS RELAXED

Since then the major and his investigators have relaxed, and their work apparently has been confined to mopping up details to fill in gaps in the chain of evidence.

Maj. Adams announced that five lines of inquiry were being followed, and that one of these dwarfed the others in promise. He indicated that his task still was far from complete.

PREPARING CASE

Nevertheless, his men already were performing the tasks customary in the technical preparation of a case for trial. Photographs of the scene were made. The auto in which Donohoe's body was found July 31, with 12 bullets in it, and the skull fractured, has been encased in canvas as though for presentation in evidence.

It was common opinion that the mystery of Donohoe's death would be solved quickly, or not for months. Adams admitted that while his men were making definite progress in tieing in the evidence obtained, they also were hoping for a "break."

BUCS END HOME STAY TODAY

Things were looking up for the Pirates today as they went into a huddle for the last game of their long home stay. After their contest with the Cardinals this afternoon the Bushwhackers will move to Brooklyn where tomorrow they will begin their last Eastern invasion with a double-header.

Winning over the Redbirds yesterday the Pirates cut into the Cub lead for half a game's worth. The Freebooters are now six and one-half games in arrears, but their sick and ailing players appear to be on the mend. Burleigh Grimes and George Grantham probably will swing into action some time next week.

Paul Waner resumed play yesterday, the slumping star going to first base in place of Earl Sheely. The regular rightfielder played a part in the Pittsburgh success with a double.

Larry Fench will twirl for the home team this afternoon. He will be opposed by Bill Sherdel or Clarence Mitchell, both of whom are lefthanders.

TOTAL LOOT OF $90,000 SPENT

Tech Food Products, Ruud, Ward Baking, Downtown Jewel Robberies Cleared

Four major holdups in Pittsburgh in the last year are solved, city detectives announced today.

The bandits are under arrest and have confessed, Detective Lieut. Edward O'Rourke reported. The money obtained from the loot, which totaled $90,000 in cash and jewelry, has been spent.

FOUR ROBBERIES SOLVED

The four "jobs" to which the prisoners signed confessions are:

Tech Food Products Company, $10,000.

Ruud Manufacturing Company, $5,921.

Unger Jewelry Store, $60,000 in jewelry.

Ward Baking Company, $15,000.

The suspects are docketed as John B. Sloan, 34, of Washington, Pa., and Joseph Maloney, 30, of Trantor street, Crafton Heights, who were said to have confessed a part in all

RESERVE RATE JOLTS MARKET

By DAVID P. SENTNER.
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9. — The butcher, baker and candlestick maker who have been playing house in the stock market today received one of those jolts.

The parachuting downward of the market for an average drop of 10 points among the headliners wiped out thousands of the recent army of new financiers.

The break was due mainly to the general advance in the rediscount rate anticipated from the raising of the rate from five to six per cent by the Federal Reserve Bank in the New York district.

A prominent banker explained to the writer that all member banks in the Federal Reserve System borrow their money from the central bank. The rediscount raise means that they will have to pay six per cent instead of five per cent for these advances.

"This will mean that money to be used for stock market purposes will be that much harder to get," he said.

The banker, however, pointed out that the effect on the market was largely psychological, as the banks, generally speaking, had plenty of money available for loans.

Richman Can Ignore Suit Dancer Started Here

There appeared today the possibility that Ellen Franks, attractive South Side dancer, would have to wait many months before her $250,000 suit against Harry Richman, star of the night clubs, stage and screen, is brought to trial in Pittsburgh's Federal Court.

Her attorney, Kivie Wolfe, admitted that the problem of serving official notice of the suit on Richman, who is in Hollywood with his fiancee, Clara Bow, the "It" girl, is a genuine problem.

Richmand must be served in the territory over which this Federal Court has jurisdiction, which is, broadly, Western Pennsylvania. Thus, Richman can evade service simply by remaining away from Western Pennsylvania.

However, it was pointed out that Richman can appoint an attorney to accept service for him and that, rather than allow the red-headed Ellen's charges to go unanswered, he may take this course.

Ellen charges that Richman locked her in his compartment on a Pennsylvania Railroad train and during a four-hour ride to Cleveland beat her.

ZEPPELIN NEARING AZORES, MAINTAINING RECORD PACE

LINER FLIES INTO AREA OF FOG

While Lady Hay was the first passenger to awaken, breezily summoning the late risers to breakfast, a couple of our star boarders certainly found it "a good night to sleep."

Nearly Misses Lunch

Leeds, whose principal reason for rising at all was to send a radio message to his wife about what a swell time he was having, almost missed lunch, which was not served until half-past one. Joachim Rickard was a close second to Leeds, only beating him to the lunch board by about two strawberries.

And if they had missed that first luncheon, they would have had something to regret for the rest of the trip.

In the gay salon, where were flowers sent to Lady Hay before we left Lakehurst, there was a burst of enthusiasm at the captain's table. Even Commander Eckener shaped his mouth in a broad grin as we all viewed the repast. Caviar, green turtle soup, squabs. Strawberries and cream.

And to this there was added exquisite wine from the Graf's "cellar."

All this above the clouds, over the Atlantic Ocean and a thousand miles from nowhere.

And then the pleasure of a calm afternoon—we had passed into smoother air. We talked and visited. And we received radio messages. And more radio messages. The wireless of the Graf threatened to be clogged with all the messages of congratulation that poured in upon Dr. Eckener. There were pleasant messages for Dr. Kiep, of the Hamburg-American Line, for Capt. Wilkins and others.

Salute From Boat

Dr. Eckener was especially pleased with one wireless from Harold B. Franklin telling him that the flight had stirred the imagination and evoked the admiration of the moving picture world, which was anxious for the Graf to hurry around to Los Angeles so the film industry could "doff its hat to one of the world's greatest adventures."

What's that little speck away up there in front of us? W swoop down within the range of and make out a staunch British vessel, the steamsl tician, which greets us l cheerily with her siren as past her at 72 land miles to her puny 19.

It is just 12:20, Eastern Standard time, when we sight the Tactician, and our position is 59 longitude west and 40 latitude north, which gives us a position 690 nautical and 793 land miles from Manhattan!

We slipped up against a few of the walls the wind is setting up for us, and although bumped and shaken about a bit, the shock was not enough to disturb the long flower-filled vases on the tables.

All the passengers aboard the Graf lined the windows to look from on high at the officers and crew of the Tactician far below, lining the decks for a glimpse of us.

Lady Hay comes in with a shivering Boston bull pup, part of the "freight," who was cold in his cargo station and wanted companionship. He gets more attention than any dog I've ever seen.

When we were some 420 nautical miles from New York and speeding comfortably over the Atlantic, I was awakened by a constant rapping on my door.

It was none other than Lady Hay, who cheerily cried:

"I was first up of all. I'm hungry. You'd better get up or you'll miss breakfast."

Young Eckener Busy

The sky was overcast a bit as we gathered for our morning meal, but it did not disturb Dr. Eckener and his officers, who ate heartily, and told of having an easy night on the bridge.

Com. Rosendahl, who had the berth above mine, remarked that it "is like old times," for he, too, is a veteran of the Graf's first flight. Lieut. Jack Richardson, who went to bed with his little daughter's parting: "Daddy, bring me a Japanese doll," in his ears, was one of the first at the breakfast table.

Sir Hubert Wilkins, with "I never sleep more than four hours," apologized for his early appetite and then buried himself in a book. Capt. Fleming and Lady Hay pleasantly chatted, but the bumpiness, which was not so noticeable to the passengers, had young Knut Eckener exercising himself considerably keeping the Graf on a straight keel above the gulf stream.

It was at 12:40 o'clock, Eastern Standard time, when New York's millions of gleaming lights spread out below us, and the towering buildings appeared like an inverted firmament. All the passengers were fascinated by the roar of whistles and sirens by which the mighty city bade godspeed to the majestic airliner. All were thrilled by the roar that swelled up and overwhelmed us.

Tribute Pleases Eckener

Dr. Eckener, his face wreathed in smiles and beaming as I have rarely seen him, came up to me from the bridge, clapped a strong, firm hand on my shoulder, and said:

"Isn't that great!"

We passed the starting line, the Statue of Liberty—her torch gleaming out in the light-dotted darkness of the harbor. Dr. Eckener was visibly in an intense emotional mood as we went out over the harbor. In almost a whisper, he confided:

"At 12:45, we made our courtesy to the Guardian Goddess. Are off around the world—off on our greatest trip!"

We started right up the coast, traveling close to 70 miles an hour. One corner of the lounge looked like a conservatory with the boxes of gorgeous flowers sent to Lady Drummond Hay. She said Sir Hubert Wilkins spent all of an hour cutting and arranging them.

Mercury Leaps 10 Degrees In Hour

Citizens of Pittsburgh were treated to a 10-degree rise in temperature this morning between 10 and 11 o'clock. The thermometers at the United States Weather Bureau showed a temperature of 68 degrees at 10 o'clock and at 11 they pointed to 78.

Navy Orders Two Airships To Eclipse Graf Zeppelin

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—While the Graf Zeppelin is speeding its way on the first lap of its trip around the world, out at Akron, O., preparations are going on for the building of two giants of the skies even larger than the big German airship.

But unlike the Graf, whose mission is one of peace, the ships being built by the Goodyear Zeppelin Corporation for the United States Navy are to be warships of the air, designed principally for long distance sea scouting. Five airplanes will ride inside each, to be let out like hornets from a nest when the big ship needs defense. Returning they will catch onto trapezes swung from the airship and be hauled safely inside.

Some idea of the size of the new craft by comparison with the Graf Zeppelin may be gained by the respective dimension. The Zeppelin has a gas volume of 3,708,000 cubic feet, the new ships 6,500,000.

The length of the German ship is 776 feet over all, against 785. The maximum diameters are 100.1 feet and 122.9 feet; the height over all, 110.6 feet and 146.5 feet.

The Zeppelin can carry a useful load of 140,000 pounds, against 182,000 for the American vessels, which will have eight engines developing 4,480 horsepower, compared with five developing 2,550 on the German ship. The latter's maximum speed is figured at 69 knots, against almost 73 for the naval airships. In cruising range at 50 knots they are closer together, as the Graf can cover 9,000 miles and the new ships are to do 9,200.

Lucky Bucks—New Money for Old

By LUCKY BUCK.

Then there's the story about the blind Scotchman... But, no, folks, I mustn't say things like that. You see, I've been traveling around so much of late that I'm beginning to feel and talk like a traveling salesman.

Now yesterday, for example, I borrowed the boss' car and hit up into the northern districts. I know it was risky, but I poured glue on the tires so they would hold the road.

After a while I found myself coasting into Butler. I breathed a breath and called halt to the pilgrimage while I gently and carefully bestowed Succulent Suskin No. A51495086E in the Sterling gas station at the corner of Washington and Jefferson streets. They're reconstructing the station, and I had a hunch that a double sawbuck wouldn't do any harm there if they did find it.

But I don't think they will. You see, they're pretty busy at that particular corner, even if it's not on the direct highway, and they didn't look careful-like to me. So maybe they'll skip it and one of you Butler folks will grab it. Or maybe it'll stroll over towards Mt. Lebanon. Anyhow, its worth a double sawbuck to the winner, and I won't help the hindermost.

The buggy still seemed hale and hearty, so I found myself ambling along over toward Grove City. Yes, I got there, and spent Lucky Buck No. V59530497D on some mighty good chicken liver at the Penn-Grove Hotel. Now those waitresses out that way are sorta keen—you can tell it in their eyes and talk and hustle—and one of them might freeze onto that buck. In fact, I rather expect them to.

But if they don't, and none of the Grove City citizens turns it in, I'm going to be sadly disappointed. In fact, I don't think I'll ever go out that way again unless it's found.

But if they find their's, I'm going to visit their burg again and say howdy, just as I'll visit New Castle again if the two bucks out there are found. You know, I felt that a town the size of New Castle ought to have more than one buck at a time, so I dropped two out there. One, No. Z64245144D, may now be lying dormant in Sam Klafter's cigar store, 32 Washington street; the other, No. Y75173257D, is in a little barber shop just around the corner from there.

That's all right—I'm glad to do it. It's really a pleasure.

And by the way, I want to nominate for today's hall of fame Mrs. William Stevens, Babcock boulevard, and J. H. Blasi, two loyal Sun-Telegraph fans, who saw their duty and done it. Each turned in a Fortunate Simoleon yesterday, bless 'em.

You want to know the numbers of the new ones, don't you, folks? Well, as a special concession, here they are; they may stray into Pittsburgh, like a couple of other bucks I know. There's no holding 'em:

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Two important moves were taken today by Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran, the first to reduce killings by prohibition agents, and the second to adopt a more aggressive attitude for the protection of federal operatives.

Doran will issue a warning to dry administrators that except in isolated mountain districts or wild, little-populated flat country, rifles must be abandoned as a weapon of enforcement, and pistols used exclusively.

As a result of the killing of Richard J. Sandlands, a dry agent attached to the customs service at Detroit, Doran declared the Treasury would take additional precautions in the future to protect its operatives.

LITTLE NEED OF RIFLES

No agent will be asked to lay down his life or take chances in operating against border smugglers, who were characterized as desperate characters.

As to the elimination of rifles, Doran said:

"There appears to be no necessity of prohibition agents carrying rifles when working in settled communities.

"However, in mountain country or on the little-settled plains, where long-range defense of an agent's life may be necessary, rifles will be permitted."

CIVILIAN SLAIN BY RIFLE

Doran's statement relative to rifles followed the killing of Tom Chandler, of Poteet, Tex., by Charles Stevens, a federal dry agent.

The report in this case held the shooting accidental, Stevens, according to witnesses, having fallen, resulting in the discharge of his rifle and the death of Chandler.

HUSBAND SEIZED IN DRY KILLING

DETROIT, Aug. 9.—(INS.)—John M. Heath, 27, sought in connection with the death of Special Prohibition Agent Richard Sandlands, was taken into custody by federal authorities today.

He returned voluntarily from Chicago, where he had been in hiding, and was arrested by special Treasury agents as he stepped off a train.

He was taken at once to the U. S. district attorney's office for questioning.

Meantime, Federal Judge Edward J. Moinet had dismissed a writ of habeas corpus for Heath's wife, Maxine, 29.

Sandlands was drowned a week ago after he had boarded Heath's small motor cruiser in the Detroit River to take charge of it for an alleged violation of navigation rules.

She asserts Sandlands refused to show his credentials and that her husband, fearing robbery, scuffled with him. Both men fell overboard, she says, but Heath managed to swim back to the boat.

RUSS THREATEN MANCHURIA

TOKIO, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Advices to Rengo News Agency from Manchuli, Manchuria, said the sound of heavy bombardment from the direction of Matsevskaka, 15 miles west of Manchuli, had been heard since 7 a. m. today. The inhabitants were much alarmed. It was believed here, however, to be no more than a Soviet demonstration.

Chinese-Russian antagonism in Manchuria has increased greatly, almost overnight, and reports from Harbin, Mukden, Manchuli and other centers today indicated definite danger of serious developments.

A message from Pogranichnaya, at the eastern terminus of the Chinese Eastern Railway, said 38 Russian airplanes maneuvered over the town yesterday.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—(INS.)—Ministers of the foreign powers at Peiping have prepared identical notes to be sent to the Nanking (Chinese Nationalist) government, stating that their countries refuse to surrender extraterritorial rights under present conditions, said a Shanghai dispatch to the Daily Telegraph, today.

BLAST SHAKES MANHATTAN

BAYONNE, N. J., Aug. 9.—(INS.)—One man is dead, four are missing, and at least 11 so seriously injured that they may die, following an explosion aboard the Standard Oil tanker William Rockefeller today.

So terrific was the force of the blast that the entire downtown section of Manhattan was rocked. The dead and injured were blown out of the boat and into the water, aflame with burning oil.

The ship was towed out to midstream by tugs to prevent a greater explosion of the huge oil reservoirs in and about the Standard Oil docks. Fire-fighting efforts were concentrated upon the blazing oil on the water, which, for nearly one hour, menaced the piers.

SLAIN MAN'S KIN BLAME ROBBERS

$50 Missing From Bradock, Florist's Purse; Thrown From Span to R. R. Tracks

Mystery surrounds the death of Daniel Chambers, 25, Braddock florist, who was found unconscious early today alongside the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad tracks under the Pittsburgh-Duquesne Junction Bridge, in Rankin, his neck cut, one leg severed—and a towel wrapped tightly about his neck.

His father, Thomas Chambers, told county detectives that he believed his son had been robbed, beaten and dropped off the bridge to the tracks, where he was struck by a freight train.

LEAVES CHILD, TOO

Chambers died an hour later in Braddock Hospital. His purse was empty, although his young wife, who, with a 2-year-old daughter, survives him, told detectives that he had been carrying $50 or more.

Hospital attaches reported that the towel had choked Chambers to some extent, although an autopsy revealed that death was caused by shock and hemorrhage induced by the amputation of one leg and the crushing of the other. What caused the cut on his neck was not determined. There were also body bruises.

TOWEL BANDAGE

Chambers was using the towel as a bandage for an arm he fractured in cranking a car several days ago.

Detectives are seeking for questioning three young men who were seen talking with Chambers in an auto last night in Braddock. It is known, too, that he was in an auto that stopped in Forest Hills last night for gasoline. Chambers himself owned no auto.

Chambers was an owner of the Limbacher & Chambers flower store in Braddock avenue. Detectives reported learning that he was a young man of exemplary habits.

four of the stickups, and Andrew L. Hufnagle, 32, of Chartiers avenue, McKees Rocks. Hufnagle is said to have admitted being one of the three men who got away with the $10,000 of the Tech Food Products.

ARRESTED AT FIGHT

The three were arrested at a prizefight in Washington, Pa., Tuesday night after one of them had drawn a gun on the detective, Lieut. O'Rourke reported. However, they were taken without further resistance.

Sloan was arrested primarily as one of the two bandits who tried to hold up Cashier Murray Coon, of the Hays National Bank, last December. The confessions came after Coon had identified Sloan today.

Detectives are trying to establish that Sloan was a member of the erstwhile McCabe gang whose holdups baffled police for years.

HOLDUP NEAR BANK

The Tech Food Products robbery occurred July 28 in front of the Pennsylvania National Bank at Butler and Thirty-fourth streets. Two Tech employes, Henry Koch and George Nusskern, were starting in to the bank with the money when three bandits grabbed the bag from their car and sped away.

Unger's jewelry store at 976 Liberty avenue was held up last December 18. Two bandits, masked and armed, swept into the store, grabbed three trays of jewelry and escaped before employes had recovered from their shock.

ROBBERY IN "STRIP"

On April 26 two bandits held up two employes of the Ruud Company in the offices at Twenty-ninth and Smallman streets and robbed them of a $5,921 payroll.

Edwin LeGoullon, 20, employe of the Ward Baking Company plant at Liberty avenue and Thirty-first street, was on his way to a bank with $5,000 in cash and $11,000 in checks and money orders last April 1 when three bandits relieved him of the funds.

'Kidnaped' Chicago Girl Just Runaway

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Catherine Sipari, 13, missing since Monday night and believed to have been held by an extortionist band, was found in a rooming house on the Southwest Side. Police believed, after questioning her, that she had run away from home. The kidnaping theory arose when her father, Gerardo Sipari, told officers he had twice received notes in the last six years demanding $1,000.

RUM RUNNERS FIGHT GUARDS

DETROIT, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Coast Guards and rum runners engaged in a spectacular pistol and revolver battle in the Detroit River early today with crafts of the rival forces racing down the center of the river less than 100 feet apart.

No casualties were reported.

The rum runners escaped to Canada with their cargoes.

The federal forces were under command of Jonah T. Hagglove, chief boatswain's mate. While patrolling the river they sighted a speedboat towing a loaded rowboat coming out from behind one of the small islands off the Ecorse shore.

Hagglove hailed the three men in the speedboat, ordering them to halt. A volley of shots was the answer. Hagglove and the two Coast Guardsmen under his command emptied their pistols twice before the runners escaped.

One of the rum runners' shots scorched Hagglove's neck slightly, while another shot the uniform cap from one of the Guardsmen's head.

SENATE'S TARIFF ROW DELAYED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—The Senate's long struggle over tariff revision is now set to begin September 3, instead of August 19, as leaders originally planned.

The postponement, effected through an agrement between Republican and Democratic leaders, was arranged after it became apparent that the majority members of the Senate Finance Committee who are rewriting the House tariff bill, could not complete their work in time to submit their report on the earlier date.

Under the party leaders' agreement, the Senate will reassemble, as planned, August 19, but will take three-day recesses thereafter until September 3, practically eliminating the likelihood of a controversy developing on some other subject which might further delay the tariff legislation.

Mexican Workers Petition to Run Mines

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 9.—Workers in the "La Muralla" and "Noche Buena" mines in the state of Zacatecas, confiscated by the federal government along with other landed property of ex-Gen. Eulalio Gutierrez, who took part in the recent rebellion, have petitioned the attorney general to turn these plants over to them to be conducted on a co-operative basis. This is being done with large silver mines in the State of Chihuahua which government took from ex-Gen. Marcelo Caraveo, a ringleader of revolt. It is understood government is considering petition favorably.

SEEK STAY FOR MOTHER-TO-BE

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—(INS.)—When Mrs. Thelma Holland appears in court today her attorney planned to request a two-month postponement of her trial because of her physical condition.

Moses C. Davis, counsel for the 22-year-old wife, said he would ask for the continuance so her baby might be born outside the walls of San Quentin prison.

Announcement of his decision as to whether he would proceed with prosecution of Mrs. Holland was awaited from District Attorney Buron Fitts, who has been conducting a personal investigation into the case of the woman accused of violation of the prohibition law.

Following discovery of a still in their home, Mrs. Holland's husband was sentenced to Folsom Prison. She, too, was ordered confined to San Quentin Penitentiary, but her sentence was reversed as a result of public indignation. A new plea of not guilty was entered in her behalf and her arraignment was scheduled for today.

Loopholes in Law Being Plugged, Judge Says

PARIS, Aug. 9.—(INS.)—"We in America have made wonderful progress in many fields, but we have failed to realize the importance of respect for the law and the administration of justice."

So says Judge Otto A. Rosalsky, of New York, who came to France on his annual vacation, accompanied by Mrs. Rosalsky.

Pointing to the Baumes law in New York state and President Hoover's crime commission, the judge declared that the "law dodger" has reached the end of his rope in the United States.

"In recent legislation, either already enacted or pending, many loopholes which afforded the criminal an escape from punishment have been plugged up," declared Judge Rosalsky. "The increasing strictness of law enforcement will close the others.

"Americans are not inherent law breakers; quite the contrary. But the country must see to it that those charged with enforcing the law carry out their duties to the letter. There must be a tendency to facilitate the prosecution and punishment of the guilty.

"The commission appointed by President Hoover will reveal the true conditions resulting from chronic law breaking and will indicate the evils which surely follow laxity in law enforcement.

"It is just becoming clear to us that, against our rapid progress in many fields stand the failure to comprehend the importance of respect for law and the workings of justice."

FOREST FIRES SPREADING

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—The imprint of the forest fire—gaunt smoking stumps bristling from charred hillsides and valleys—continued to widen throughout the northwest today despite efforts of thousands of men to check the conflagrations.

The fires thus far have taken one life and caused damage estimated in the millions of dollars. Frank Franz, of Seattle, was fatally injured while fighting a fire near Chanapecosh Hot Springs, Wash., when he was crushed by a large boulder.

With new fires breaking out sporadically in Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and Manitoba, Canada, a murky haze blanketed the entire area. An accurate count of the blazes was impossible, but in nearly every national forest of the region fires were raging.

Lack of rain, frequent lightning storms, low humidity and careless campers were making this one of the most disastrous seasons for many years, officials said.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—(INS.)—Peggy Hopkins Joyce's third millionaire husband, James Stanley Joyce, is defendant in a suit for divorce, on file here today, in which Mrs. Nelle M. Joyce accuses him of cruelty. The wife, formerly Mrs. R. N. Vail, of New York, married Joyce in 1926. Joyce, divorced by the famous Peggy in 1921, after shortly more than a year of wedded life, was described by Peggy as "the best of my five husbands, although he did treat me rough."

SAY HIJACKERS BURNED BOAT

FORT ERIE, Ont., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—The burning of a rum-running boat to the waters' edge at the docks in Buffalo yesterday is attributed by officials to hijackers, who, it is believed, set it afire after seizing its cargo.

Prior to the outbreak on the boat a small sedan loaded with Canadian ale was seized near the Buffalo-Fort Erie dock.

The driver of the car abandoned it and fled.

Beer of the same brand as that in the car was found in the ruins of the boat.

Discharged Envoy Accused In Beating of Bride

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 9.—(INS.)—The dismissal of Warren E. Patterson, of Pottsville, as U. S. trade commissioner at Bombay by Department of Commerce officials resulted in the disclosure that his bride, Mrs. Leona Slack Patterson, had been held prisoner in their cabin aboard the liner President Adams.

The climax of the 34-day voyage came Tuesday when Mrs. Patterson departed for the home of her wealthy father, Cornelius F. Slack, of this city.

Soon after leaving India, the ship was thrown into excitement when violent screams were heard from the Patterson cabin. The ship's purser, the first to reach the scene, declared that he found the young bride being beaten. Dr. Bayley, ship's surgeon, who was summoned to the cabin, said the girl was suffering from bruises.

Capt. Kohlmeister issued an order that the young bride must be protected from her husband.

O. T. Hopkins, assistant director of foreign and domestic commerce, who helped in the investigation, announced that he has not finished with the case.

"Patterson left his post of duty," Hopkins said, "without permission and without informing anyone. He is discharged."

Mrs. Patterson met Patterson while traveling with her parents in India.

HAGUE PARLEY NEAR FAILURE

THE HAGUE, Aug. 9.—(INS.)—Despite London denials, reports persisted here this afternoon that Premier MacDonald, of England, may make a sudden and dramatic appearance in The Hague to attempt to solve the conference deadlock.

Failure of the Belgian and German delegates to break the deadlock led to fears that the conference may collapse within the next 36 hours unless concessions are made.

Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer in the British government, who precipitated the deadlock, refused to modify Britain's demand for revision of the Young plan to gain for Britain a larger share of Germany's reparation annuities.

France, Belgium and Italy want the Young plan to go into effect the first of next month in the form in which it was drafted by the experts in Paris last spring.

The Rhineland evacuation question has been pushed into the background by the dispute over the reparations issue.

Great Britain threatens to reopen the whole reparation question, making another conference necessary.

Delegates from the continental powers are hopeful that a complete collapse of the conference can be averted. But it is pointed out that, if such a crisis comes to pass, the Dawes plan would still remain in force to control Germany's reparation course.

Lack of Publicity Hampers Charity

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Man's inhumanity to man apparently is due to lack of publicity. Local papers carried the pathetic story of a mother watching over the body of her 12-year-old daughter at the morgue because she lacked burial expenses, and within a few hours contributions totaling several thousands of dollars had been made, several burial plots offered and material aid for the mother arranged.

Elinor Smith Forced To Land in Storm

PITT, TECH SUMMER STUDENTS COMPLETE COURSE

LEARNING HELD PASS KEY TO VALUES

University Awards 270 Degrees at Exercises; Tech Has Record Class

"Learning should be worn easily and lightly, never as a ponderous distinction of impressing importance, nor as a high hat on a swollen head with an ascending current of hot air in the funnel," Dr. Andrey Avinoff, director of Carnegie Institute, told graduating students at the University of Pittsburgh today in his commencement address on "The Art of Knowing." Learning, he said, should be a pass key to values.

Two hundred and seventy students received degrees. Rev. Karl Stein, pastor of the Grace Reform Church, offered the invocation, and Miss Virginia Kendrik, contralto, gave four numbers. Chancellor John G. Bowman presided, and the summer session orchestra played.

ONE HIGHEST HONORS

Only one student was graduated with highest honors, Paul McLain, of South Lang avenue, who was graduated from the college. Three were graduated with high honor, Margaret G. Dunlap, of Bailey street, and Nellie Norcas, of Bellen street, from the school of education, and Sidney Odel, from the college.

Honor students from the school of education included Jane Howard Barkley, Mildred-Clement Hall, Jane Hoffman, Phyllis Angeline Irons, Virginia S. Lake, Sara G. Lowrey, and William R. Reinhart; from the college, David Glick, G. Francis Bobler and Simon Cantor.

Throughout his talk Dr. Avinoff stressed the importance of using learning as a means to acquiring proper values. He discussed the attitude of mutual distrust which exists between scientific and artistic circles.

Man Juggles Anvil To Celebrate 102nd Year

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—John Skinner celebrated his one hundred and second birthday by walking a mile from his home to a downtown club where he turned in a lively jig and performed his daily dozen with a 160-pound blacksmith's anvil. Skinner, who is Marion county's oldest resident, then hurried home to do a few odd chores about the house, as he was anxious to work up an appetite for a birthday dinner. Skinner is an exponent of exercise, and plenty of it.

LARGEST CLASS AT TECH

Seven hundred and three students, the largest number ever enrolled at a summer session, today completed their work at the twelfth summer school at Carnegie Institute of Technology. Of this number, 435 students attended the eight weeks course to make up back work complete their requirements for degrees or lighten their studies for the coming year.

One hundred and thirty students attended the six weeks' course for teachers of public schools, 102 of them taking classes in the College of Fine Arts and the remainder studying in the College of Industries. Thirty-one prospective freshmen completed work to meet entrance requirements for the fall term.

As has been the custom, no exercises will mark the closing of the session. The students who have completed their degree requirements either will be awarded their diplomas now or at commencement exercises next June.

Snook Demonstrates to Jurors Just How He Killed Co-Ed

on the lonely rifle range the night of the murder. Snook had been telling about the physical struggle between him and Miss Hix just before he struck the first blow with the hammer.

Prosecutor Chester then staged another demonstration. He placed two chairs side by side in front of the jury and called Snook from the witness stand to occupy one of them.

REALISTIC ENACTMENT

The prosecutor seated himself at Snook's right in the position Snook said Miss Hix occupied. "Which of your hands held the hammer when you hit her the first time?" the prosecutor asked.

Snook swallowed hard and replied: "The right hand."

Chester slid from the chair to the floor in the manner Snook said Theora slid from the car.

The jurors leaned forward in their seats. It was very quiet in the crowded courtroom.

Chester sat on the floor, his back to Snook, while Snook answered his question:

"I hit her two or three times and then she slid clear out on to the ground."

"Then what did you do?" Chester asked.

"That's what I don't remember."

Snook insisted he had told Chester and police nothing about cutting the girl's throat.

"If we say you did tell about it, we're liars, aren't we?" Chester said.

"Yes, sir," replied Snook.

Miss Hix had nothing in her hand except her pocket book, Snook said.

He declared that when he came to his senses after beating the girl to the ground with the hammer, he found himself sitting on the running board of the car.

"I spoke to her," Snook said. "I called to her. I said, 'come on,' or 'let's go,' or something like that. I know I said something to her, but she didn't move."

"I realized what had happened and I got scared.

"So I climbed in the car and drove away.

"I was scared of everything around there. I was uneasy about everything."

"You knew she was dead?" Chester asked.

"Yes sir," replied Snook and then, quickly catching himself, he said: "I assumed that to be it."

SLEPT ALL NIGHT

Snook denied saying to police: "I was a damned coward." He said after going home he cooked hamburger, ate "part of it," went to bed and slept all night.

Chester questioned the witness about his trip to the apartment he shared with Theora and about Snook's removal of the articles there. Snook said he burned the pajamas and girl's slippers in the furnace at home and left the other articles at the office. He denied putting the co-ed's compact into the furnace. He denied telling a police officer he burned the things for fear they might "get me in bad."

DENIES CONFESSION

Chester questioned Snook in great detail concerning what transpired at the police grilling the defenadant was given after his arrest.

Chester read scores of questions and answers from a recorded conversation between Chief French and Snook. The defendant repudiated practically all of this conversation which occurred when he was being grilled. "No, I didn't say that," Snook reiterated as each bit of the conversation was read.

Q.—Did you tell Chief French that Miss Hix was a "rare type?"

A.—I did not.

Snook could not remember his attorney, John F. Seidel, advising him as he was about to confess the crime not to confess. He did remember Prosecutor Chester ordering Seidel out of the room.

CHARGES CHESTER HIT HIM

The defendant could recall clearly the "slamming" Prosecutor Chester gave him a short time after that.

Q.—(By Chester)—I hit you?

A.—Yes, you slammed me on the head four or five times.

Chester is a slim, well-set up chap of about 30. He stood directly in front of the witness chair as he questioned Snook.

Q.—What did you do when I hit you?

A.—I simply took it. I picked up my glasses which you knocked off. I told you I was all in.

Q.—Isn't it a fact you had just told me you would not answer any more questions?

A.—I don't recall that.

Chester asked Snook if he hadn't slapped him with his open hands. Snook thought Chester's fists were closed, he said. The blows were dealt on the side of the head.

Snook denied that during the police grilling he had said:

"I know nothing about the death of Theora Hix, but if I killed her I was sane."

Court was adjourned at this point until 1:30 this afternoon, when cross-examination of Snook will be resumed.

TELLS AMAZING STORY

The cross-examination of the strange, unfathomable defendant is unfolding one of the most amazing stories ever told from a witness stand. Under fire of the state's cross-examination, Snook squirmed in his seat with embarrassment as Chester revealed that he had signed "Mabel" to a number of love letters he had written to the co-ed whom he invariably addressed as "My Dearie."

"MABEL" LETTERS READ

Prosecutor Chester read excerpts of the "Mabel" letters to the jury, over the protests of defense attorneys, in an attempt to show that Snook was more responsible than the girl for the "affair" they were carrying on. Some of the letters expressed regret at even being separated for a while, and others suggested methods by which they might be together more frequently.

"Isn't it a fact, Dr. Snook," Chester asked, "that Miss Hix expressed regret that she had ever become friendly with you?"

"I cannot say she expressed regret about starting, but she did say she was in doubt whether it was the right thing to keep our relations up," Snook replied.

SILLY LETTERS

The "Mabel" letters Snook wrote to Miss Hix were impassioned missives, silly in text. They were so comical in spots they drew unrestrained laughter from the spectators.

When Chester confronted Snook with the letters he had written Miss Hix while she was in Cleveland and asked him why he had signed them "Mabel," the witness, after manifesting some confusion, declared he signed them "any name that came to my mind as she knew whom they were from." Examination of the packet of letters revealed that most of them were signed "Mabel."

DOUBT SNOOK'S STORY

The prosecutor had not quizzed Snook about the murder when court was resumed this morning. This he planned to do in an effort to prove to the jury that Snook, in his story of the crime as related to the jury yesterday, did not tell all the truth.

Snook testified that he was forced to batter Miss Hix down with a hammer when she attacked him in his car, which he had parked on a lonely rifle range outside the city on the night of June 13. He claimed she "threatened to shoot him" and also to kill his wife and baby.

WEEPS ON STAND

His voice choked and finally he wept as he declared he did not intend to kill her. Everything went blank after he had hit her three or four blows. He could not account for the fact that her jugular vein was severed. Asked directly if he intended to kill the girl, he exclaimed:

"Heaven knows I never thought I would do it. She was a good friend of mine."

SHOWN CO-ED'S CLOTHING

Snook was shown a light blue girdle previously identified as Theora Hix's.

"Did you ever see this girdle before?" he was asked.

"No."

"Did you slash this girdle?"

"I did not," Snook replied, averting his gaze from the exhibit.

Cross-examination of Snook was begun late yesterday. He was questioned by Chester.

Chester showed him the pistol he had identified as Miss Hix's. Snook took it in his hand.

Q.—Is it in good shape?

A.—(Examining it)—it doesn't cock.

Q.—Oh, it is broken, isn't it? It doesn't work.

A.—Well, it doesn't cock very well.

The prosecutor read one of his "Mabel" letters to Miss Hix. It had to do with the operation Snook performed on himself.

"Yes, I wrote that," Snook admitted.

Chester showed the witness half a dozen letters, all signed "Mabel," which Snook admitted were written by him to Miss Hix.

Chester read several of the impassioned letters Snook had written to the co-ed. One of them sounded so silly, Defense Attorney E. O. Rickett got to h's feet and said:

"These letters should go into the record under the issue of insanity."

The spectators laughed and the court rapped for order.

Wife Slayer Hanged In Maryland Prison

BALTIMORE, Aug. 9.—(INS.)—John Orestes Marsh, 52, Carroll County farmer, shortly after midnight today was hanged at Maryland State Penitentiary for killing his young wife April 9. The execution was delayed several minutes because of repeated collapses after he mounted the gallows.

After a drinking bout last April Marsh chased his wife, 28, with a shotgun and as she entered a barn seeking safety, he fired and killed her.

Two children were left motherless, and the oldest, Pauline, 10, refused to have anything to do with her father.

CULINARY HEIGHTS ATTAINED ON GRAF, SAYS LADY HAY

1,500 POUNDS OF FOOD ON DIRIGIBLE

Lone Woman on World Flight Describes Vast Variety Of Delicacies Available

By LADY DRUMMOND HAY,

Only woman passenger who will make the Hearst-Zeppelin round-world flight.

(Copyright, 1929, in United States and all other countries except continental Europe, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., all rights reserved, and reproduction in whole or in part prohibited. Copyright, 1929, in continental Europe by August Scherl, G. M. B. H., and by Ullstein.)

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 9.—(Radio via Chatham, Mass.)—Bathed in a phosphorescent aureole of giant white beacon lights, which chequer Lakehurst's unromantic flying field with eerie enchantment, the silver Graf Zeppelin rose, phantomlike, from the outstretched hands of white-uniformed marines, running and gesticulating like ghostly legions, dwarfed by distance, as we took the air at 11:40 p. m. Wednesday night.

We passed from a symphony of silver to golden glory as the lights of New York City scattered themselves beneath us like grains of golden stardust, tracing patterns strange and fantastic set with the jewelled brilliance of ruby, emerald and topaz electric signs.

Such was the panorama of the first hour of our historic Hearst-Zeppelin-Round-the-World flight, holding the passengers spellbound as we passed over the greatest city of the world.

Why Sleep?

New York, whose almost mathematically regular streets and avenues first greeted us at 12:40, looked like a sparkling giant's checkerboard. The passengers show no desire for sleep, but are just beginning to group together in animated parties.

Lightly putting the inevitably plodding time behind us, we soared with splendid wings over the beauteous Statue of Liberty in New York harbor, dipping the nose of the great Zeppelin in its formal leave-taking for Cape Race. Myriad little coastal lights twinkled below us—a wonderful departure!

With an almost unbelieveable ease, and fancied by the weather gods we slipped through the breathing sky at 75 miles an hour, off at last on our greatest adventure.

The mighty Zeppelin once more shall write aerial history into the record books of this progressive universe.

Yesterday morning we had breakfast to inaugurate our cheery, informal aerial existence, which we are joyfully looking forward to for the next three weeks.

Eckener Genial

Dr. Eckener was in the best of spirits, smiling and greeting all the passengers, all of whom showed up at the tables but Joachim Rickard, William B. Leeds and Merian C. Cooper. The old air commander, overlooking the Atlantic with me from an observation window, explained that the Zeppelin was entering the zone of the Gulf stream. Never before have I seen Dr. Eckener so relaxed and carefree and genial on the first day of any trip.

For breakfast, as served by Steward Kubis, we had delicious blueberries and cream, any amount of fresh rolls and tea and coffee; eggs (any way you wanted 'em); sausage and jams. Fifteen-year-old Ernest, the assistant steward, who looks only 12, worked on the cabins.

Dr. Eckener's happy mood was reflected in Capts. Lehmann, Fleming and von Schiller, who breakfasted in "shifts" with the passengers, answering dozens of eager questions. Capt. von Schiller, telling me of the world-wide interest in the new Zeppelins under construction, remarked that the company had already received inquiries regarding the aerial transportation by Zeppelin of a sacred Indian elephant belonging to an Indian nabob. He said:

Times Change

"And it only weighs four tons—only four tons!"

I remember what a world-wide joke it was last October, when Karl von Wiegand wirelessed from the crippled Zeppelin fighting her way across the Atlantic, that provisions had run short and we were "reduced to cavair and champagne."

It was your joke right enough, then, for we really had run short of food, and the "cavair and champagne" was the finishing touch to the pathos of our situation.

Sitting here in the silken-hung passenger salon of the airship, before a spread which might suggest manna were it not so solidly reminiscent of the earthly efforts of human chefs, I think the laugh is ours—this far on our world flight, anyhow. None of us can foretell what is going to happen next, but the present moment, as far as food is concerned, is more than satisfying.

From the rigors of "sausage and ham and bread," "ham, bread and sausage," of the first trans-Atlantic Zeppelin flight 10 months ago, we rose—very literally—to ambitious culinary heights on the Mediterranean flight this Easter in March. I, for one, decided that our white uniformed, high-hatted cook, Otto Manz, had surpassed himself, and sprouting whiter wings, might be whisked away any day by gourmet gods on Olympus to serve such ambrosia as we unsainted mortals were enjoying.

Trio of Feasts

But "that is nothing worth—" as Shakespeare put it, compared to the thrice daily feasts provided on this round-world trip. Imagine, if you can, the thrill of speeding through the air, on an adventure that the whole world is watching with amazement and emotion, to the accompaniment of sybaritical repasts.

It is like going to a party three times a day in a small town—we meet the same people all the time, and chat over delicacies that no home kitchen provides for workaday occasions!

I was informed before we left that the total weight for food was limited to 1,500 pounds for the four consecutive days of the trans-Atlantic flight West to East. It sounded a tremendous lot to me, until it was pointed out that the passengers, officers and crew will number about 65 persons, and that reckoning on three "formal" meals a day, it means 780 substantial meals during the period, not to mention the "little appetizers" and afternoon tea in between. I nearly let slip a grin too broad to be ladylike at the thought of any one requiring "appetizers" on the Zeppelin. Why, at that altitude, in the crisp, fresh air, we are as hungry as hunters all day.

Gallons of Soup

Listen, housewives! How does this sound—I admit that the very idea staggered me. We have 26 gallons of soup on board, 10 different kinds, from the aristocratic green turtle to the tomato soup of the everyday world. Twenty gallons of prepared vegetables, 24 cans of asparagus; 36 pounds of bacon and sausages; not to mention whole hams, salami, tongues, galantines, 25 pounds of corned beef, two huge sirloins, eight roast racks of lamb, more than 16 gallons of prepared stews, 64 chickens and ducks; some 700 bread rolls, a hundred pounds of bread, and a dozen sandwich loaves; 48 pounds of table butter. These are only a few of the items which I mention at random.

To season them for "capricious appetites" there are three gallons of salad dressing on board, three pounds of salt, six jars of mustard, 10 pints of table sauces, two gallons of olives and gherkins. Foie gras, caviar, ice cream, every description of fresh fruit, from strawberries to honeydew melons, peaches, blueberries, apples, pears, cherries, oranges, grapefruits loom largely on the list.

A regular American breakfast is served, in sharp contrast to the usual Continental "petit dejeuner" of rolls and coffee. Luncheon was equally luxurious.

Chef Inspired

Otto Manz, our cook, said flying is a "real inspiration to the chef." So even chefs are getting "air-minded"—a useful asset to the puff-pastry cook! The air certainly seems to agree with Manz, whose genial smile is insistent enough to sweeten sour milk. Henry Kubis, the steward, seems to be getting ever more nimble as if the Winged Hermes had been teaching him an aerial trick or two.

The Americans can have their cereals for breakfast, the Germans their soup at lunch, sausage and gherkins; the Frenchman his foie gras, and drip-coffee; Sir Hubert Wilkins and myself, English, have eggs and bacon, marmalade and tea for breakfast. But I did not see any rice on the list for the Japanese officer and the two Japanese newspapermen who are getting on at Friedrichshafen, or bortsch, blini and vodka for the Russian. Never mind, caviar and champagne, even out of cardboard cups, need no translation into any language. Ave! Olympus! Isn't it just too bad to tempt you with such dainties, in your own realm, too, and then dart away at 80 miles an hour?

U. S. NAVY GOBS ARE PRAISED BY ECKENER

Tells Sir Hubert Wilkins Lakehurst Has Provided Aid in Handling Graf

By SIR HUBERT WILKINS

Famous explorer, who crossed the Atlantic aboard the Graf Zeppelin from Friedrichshafen, and is writing the story of the Hearst-Zeppelin Round-the-World Flight.

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 9.—(Radio via Tuckerton and Chatham)—The rising sun yesterday morning, which caught up with us as we were slipping gently over an unruffled Atlantic for below, disclosed Dr. Hugo Eckener reading his voluminous congratulatory mail. But with each letter, the German airmaster would give an aside:

"Congratulate the United States Navy. It was their efficient support at Lakehurst, and their coming aid on the west coast, that is making this flight possible."

Dr. Eckener and all the other officers are highly appreciative and enthusiastic over the perfect aid given by the men at Lakehurst, and are all applause for the American manner of handling aircraft and their crews.

FAVORABLE WINDS

The daylight weather report showed the wind increasingly favorable for our easterly course until the afternoon, when we are swinging to the north. The engines are running perfectly, and the fabric covering on the bow is nicely tightened.

The passengers slept soundly, after retiring in the wee sma', and rose enthusiastic about the comfort and luxury aboard the giant, space-conquering liner. They were all thrilled by the announcement at breakfast that we are approaching Europe at the splendid speed of between 65 and 70 miles an hour, and expecting to land Saturday.

A new page of aviation history is being unfolded in this monstrous book of progress. What can I write? I can do more than skeletonize! What will be the last entry in this chapter—success? We all believe that, if all goes as smoothly as the start.

While the tickets were being signed, whisperings of Russian passport difficulties stirred the imagination. But this was broken up abruptly by the blinding Kleig lights and noises.

NERVES TENSED

Everyone, including the cameramen, was nervously tensed, and the rush for the hangar found everyone busy with friends. Eager questions were hurriedly answered; there was a quick tour of inspection, and a hasty "good-bye" to our well-wishers. Then we were aboard!

A rapid survey of my fellow-passengers brought many strange faces, many new and old shipmates. We moved, stern first, to the free air. Then, a few moments of delay while the low-mounted searchlights threw fiery skyscraping forests into the air. They are almost touchable from the cabin.

Up! Up! Over New York, over the mightiest city! Soon we had dipped to the goddess in the harbor and were away on our journey. Then, after chatting in the cabin, we retired as the Graf ploughed eastward to Europe.

Zep Radiogram Picked Up in Oakmont

Interception of a message from the Graf Zeppelin was reported today by Clarence Thompson, of Oakmont, who said he heard clearly parts of a radiogram from the ship on a 24-meter wavelength. It was signed Denne and read:

"Racing through the night over the South Atlantic. If all the days are like the first, this will be the most outstanding chapter in aerial history. We are following a course south of the eastbound steamer lane. During the afternoon the winds were not favorable, and therer was a damp cloudiness. Capt. Eckener is pushing back, hoping to find a tail wind."

CAPONE MOVED TO SAVE LIFE

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—(INS.)—Al (Scarface) Capone today was lodged in the Eastern State Penitentiary.

The notorious Chicago gangster was removed from the Holmesburg County prison, where he was serving a sentence for one year for carrying a loaded pistol after threats against his life had been made by other prisoners.

Prison officials believed that his fellow inmates were aroused to jealousy by the large number of persons who visited Capone.

Capone was removed with the utmost secrecy while the prisoners were eating.

DAILY SHORT STORY

The Man of It

By JACK WOODFORD.

MRS. DAWSON was one of those women who prided herself upon "never interfering" in anyone else's affairs—and spent half of her time inadvertently, innocently, indirectly, subconsciously, and in every other known way, arranging matches.

The time came, however, when it appeared that almost everyone in town was married off; that is, everyone except Elizabeth Trent, who had a secretarial position at the bank, and Harry Drew, who was an assistant cashier there.

Elizabeth Trent was the daughter of the Trents, of Fallville, which means everything to anyone who has ever been in Fallville, and nothing to anyone who hasn't. She was 28 years old, and the finest girl in town—all of the men who passed her up for flappers that eventually worried them to death admitted that.

Harry Drew was of the Drews of Fallville, once very wealthy, of course; but since the Civil War . . . not so good! He was admitted to be, by all of the flappers who had passed him up for sheiks that eventually worried them to death, the finest chap in town.

What a waste of matrimonial material thought Mrs. Dawson. In fact, she did more than think about it. She invited Elizabeth and Harry up for week end. She almost arranged with the weather man to have a good moon out the nights that they came, a nice softly red one, preferably, with a little mist around it to give a soft focus.

Alas! One morning, after a dozen such experiments, Mrs. Dawson spoke of the matter to Mr. Dawson at breakfast.

"Why do you suppose, John, that Elizabeth Trent and Harry Drew don't get married?"

"Why do I suppose! Goodness, woman, is there anything safe from your chronic supposing? Why do you supposes Mrs. Goodwin next door permits Mr. Goodwin to wear red flannel underwear, and further why do you suppose she advertises the fact to the neighbors by hanging it on the line in the back yard?"

"Don't be obscene—you're too old for it to be becoming. The fact of the matter is, I've helped them to know their minds in every way conceivable, but—"

"You think you're smart, don't you, just because you have managed to marry off a lot of half baked kids in the community. What are you going to do when they all begin to get around to the divorce stage in a few years—you'll be run out of town on a rail—or, considering your weight my dear, perhaps two rails. You ought to be ashamed of yourself!" He stirred his coffee reflectively, looking sadly across at her. "If you really want those two married," he bragged, "I suppose I might do the job for you—for a consideration."

"You—make a match—don't be silly; what's the consideration?"

"I thought your curiosity and natural acquisitiveness would get you—well, it's not a new fur coat I have in mind—but if you'll let me go to New York alone for three weeks this fall, and take a whirl at the night clubs, I'll marry off Harry and Elizabeth for you. Is it a go?" Mrs. Dawson was piqued. Never before in all of their married life had her husband challenged her superiority upon any subject whatsoever under the sun, save the one subject of making money, the single family accomplishment to which he laid personal claim. She looked at him carefully. Decided that he had become so set in his ways that a vampire would only cause him to scurry for cover and decided to take a long chance.

A fortnight later, Elizabeth and Harry were the talk of the town. Never before had there been such a pair of honeymooners seen in the vicinity. They were literally psychopathic about each other. They walked down the street holding hands. Harry called her once an hour from the bank; she came down every day to go to lunch with him. Called for him every night. They were, beyond the question of a doubt, the two mushiest individuals ever heard of west of the Mississippi, or east of it, either.

"Well," challenged Mrs. Dawson at breakfast, the day Mr. Dawson, looking 10 years younger, was scheduled to leave for New York to enjoy his first vacation alone in years, "aren't you going to tell me before you go how you managed to do it?"

"Yes, for a consideration. If you'll kiss me goodby when I go to the train, and look like a good loser; and promise to welcome me with a smile and ask no questions when I come back, I'll tell you," she promised, and managed a somewhat pathetic grin.

"It was simplicity itself. I called Harry into my office and told him there were rumors that he was going out with the Trent 'girl' and I wouldn't have it—he was too valuable around the bank to lose. He denounced me and almost resigned. Then I called in Elizabeth Trent and told her that she mustn't think of marriage because Harry was indispensible to the bank. She sassed me for the first time in her life and looked terrifically complicated. Two days later Harry came in to tell me he was engaged. You see, I happened to think that old man Drew and old lady Trent, when they were alive, were the two stubbornest individuals in the state—and I figured that there must be some kick left somewhere in the blood."

PATRICIA PITT'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Brilliant Social Season For School Set Here At Christmas Time

WHEN we talk of winter social events we almost always think of debutantes and of formal bows to society and of balls for the buds. Of course, the newest full-fledged members of the social world are the center of attention practically the whole season. But at Christmas time there is a set, a few years younger, that is much entertained.

Of course, I'm referring to the girls home from Dobbs Ferry, or Westover, or any of the other exclusive schools for sub-debs, and to the boys back from prep schools. They have their own social life for the all too brief Yuletide vacation.

THIS winter there will be a number of dances, as usual, for the debutantes and cotillion leaders of the future. Among these will be a dance the Frank B. Gordons, of Ellsworth avenue, will give December 28 in honor of their daughter, Mary Gordon. The scene of the party has not yet been definitely decided upon.

Mary Gordon is away for the summer, by the way. She's the guest of friends in Beaumaris, Canada.

And Mary's mother and father will leave the latter part of the month for a motor trip through the Carolinas.

DR. AND MRS. ROBERT MILLIGAN and their daughter, Peggy, are at Ahmic Lake, I've heard.

Elizabeth Craig, daughter of the Mark Rodgers Craigs, is back from Muskoka Lake, where she was the guest of the Wilson O. Campbells.

After being the guests of the T. D. Van Camps at Columbus, O., the Prescott L. Lyons and Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Griffiths and Mrs. Elizabeth Nevin Jennings have returned to their Sewickley homes.

Just now the Raymond Osbornes, of Sewickley, have as their guests Mrs. Edward Lysaght-Griffin, of Chanute, Kan., and her daughter, Emilie Lysaght-Griffin.

MRS. CHAUNCEY O'NEIL and Mrs. Elizabeth Nevin Jennings, of Sewickley, are down in Baltimore visiting Mrs. O'Neil's mother, Mrs. George Latimer Potter. An Susan O'Neil, Mrs. O'Neil's daughter, who has been at Blue Hill, Me., visiting Sylvia Robertson, is joining her mother in Baltimore, and later they will go to Wachapreague, Va., to spend a fortnight.

* * *

MRS. MARGARET REID HARVEY, of Hollywood, Cal., formerly of Wilkinsburg, was guest of honor at a bridge-luncheon given yesterday in the Keystone Athletic Club by Miss Edna Payne, of Wilkinsburg. There were 12 guests.

* * *

MRS. ANNA M. BARRINGER, of Thomas boulevard, has made known the engagement of her daughter, Miss Frances Margaret Barringer, to Dr. James Vincent Cox, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Cox, of Hazleton, Pa. A late September wedding is planned.

COURT GRACE, No. 523, Catholic Daughters of America, will hold a card party Tuesday evening in the Knights of Columbus Home, Sharpsburg, for the benefit of the Vincentian Home for Incurables. Bridge, "500," euchre and bingo will be played.

* * *

DR. AND MRS. CHARLES A. HILL, of the Cathedral Mansions, are spending August in Ontario, Canada.

GOLDEN RULE SISTERHOOD, Dames of Malta, will sponsor a card party to be held Saturday night, August 17, at the home of Mrs. Blanche Atkins, in Standish street, East End. Mrs. Elizabeth Harold and Mrs. Marie Jacobs are co-hostesses for the affair.

HOOVER ELUDES LIBERAL CHIEF

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—(INS.)—Spencer M. Degolier, who besides being mayor of Bradford, Pa., is vice president of the National Association Opposed to Blue Laws, was en route back to Bradford today after unsuccessfully trying to see President Hoover.

Mayor Degolier spent four days in Washington endeavoring to penetrate the barriers to the President's office, but without success.

Several weeks ago, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Canon William Sheafe Chase, and various other reformers had an audience with the President and advocated stricter Sabbath observance for the Capital. They reported Mr. Hoover had graciously received them.

"I am mayor of Bradford, a Republican, and serving my third term," said Degolier, before leaving. "I am deeply disappointed that the President couldn't find time in four days to see me and my co-workers. We asked only five minutes. He saw Bishop Cannon and Canon Chase and the advocates of Sunday blue laws, but he couldn't see us who oppose sectarian laws."

"NO PROPAGANDA"

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—George Akerson, secretary to President Hoover, today said one inviolate rule of this administration was that the White House should not be used for propaganda purposes if it could be prevented.

Akerson's statement was in reply to Mayor Spencer M. Degolier, of Bradford, Pa., who, after a four-day stay in Washington, returned home last night with an expression of regret that the President had declined to see him and other officers of the National Association Opposed to Blue Laws.

Unidentified Man Dies Under Bridge

An unidentified man, about 60, was found dead under the ramp along Duquesne way at the Point today, police reported, by Steve Condo, of 301 Penn avenue, and Frank Chester, of 211 Grant street. At the morgue an autopsy disclosed pneumonia as the cause of death. Nothing was found in the man's clothing to throw light on his identity.

The barometer is still relatively high over the East, but the pressure is diminishing, resulting in a decidedly flat barometric condition. There is considerable cloudiness over the eastern half of the country and local showers occurred during yesterday and last night at many places. The most pronounced rain area is in Missouri, Kansas and extending southwestward over the panhandle to Arizona. A low pressure area is centered over Manitoba and extends southwestward over the Dakotas, Wyoming and Utah to Arizona. It produced only light widely scattered showers in the Canadian Northwest. The temperatures are rising slowly.

HOOVER BEGINS BIRTHDAY TRIP

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—(INS.)—President Hoover will leave Washington this afternoon, bent on giving himself a little birthday present in the form of a week-end of seclusion and rest from his office.

Tomorrow, the chief executive will be 55 years old, and he plans to celebrate the day on his 164-acre Virginia camp on the Upper Rapidan River.

Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh head the list of guests who will help Mr. Hoover observe the day. The colonel and his bride are making a special flight here from New York to accompany the President to the Virginia camp. They are due to reach Bolling Field at noon. So far as could be learned, no special arrangements have been made to celebrate Mr. Hoover's birthday. Mrs. Hoover and her son, Allan, have been at camp all week, with Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Jr., and it may be they have some sort of "party" arranged.

The President intends to start immediately after lunch today, making the trip as usual by motor. With him will go the Lindberghs, Herbert, Jr., and a score of White House attaches.

Hylan Withdraws, May Back Walker

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—John F. Hylan, once Tammany's choice for mayor, and more recently an independent candidate with aspirations for Republican backing, formally withdrew from the mayoralty race and, indirectly, wished Mayor James J. Walker the best of luck. Accusing the Republican leaders of insincerity because of their failure to pick him as their candidate, Hylan indicated that he was ready to make peace with Tammany Hall.

REDEEMED FROM MISERY AND HER HEALTH BUILT UP

Another Lady Finds Relief From Pain and Gains Health

"I caught a severe cold last winter that seemed to settle in my kidneys. They grew very tender and caused my back to ache most of the time, said Mrs. S. Margien, of Washington, Pa., when the World's Tonic interviewer asked her to tell her story for the benefit of suffering people. "When I got up in the morning my back hurt so I could hardly get around. During the night I often had to get up, and my back hurt so much I could not sleep. Secretions from my kidneys were often very scant and sometimes quite offensive in odor. There were times when my bowels would not move for two or three days. Little pimples broke out all over my back and face, and my tongue became furred and yellow. I noticed that often my breath was bad. My stomach troubled me from time to time, until finally I realized I was being slowly poisoned by the failure of my kidneys to carry off the impurities in my blood.

"Nothing I had taken for my kidneys relieved me much. One day my father said that there was no use in treating my kidneys alone, as the trouble had gone too far for that, and that what I needed was a general constitutional treatment that would build up my whole system. I did not know what to get, but just at that time I read an advertisement of World's Tonic. It told of a man who had been relieved of severe kidney trouble, and I determined to give this tonic a trial.

"I had taken the greater part of a big bottle before I realized that my bowels were much more regular. Then I noticed that the secretions from my kidneys were greater in quantity than they had been. The rash on my face and back healed up, and while the pain in my back held on for a little longer, that soon disappeared too. My breath was corrected, and my stomach digested my meals comfortably.

"After about four weeks' treatment I realized what World's Tonic had done for me—how it had redeemed me from misery and built up my health. The more I think of it the more astonished I am to think that troubles of such long standing and severe nature can be overcome so quickly, and I tell my friends that World's Tonic is the most wonderful medicine made." World's Tonic can be had of Dow's, formerly McCulloch's, also May's, or of any other first-class drug store. (A-32).

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

Charming the Game

PROF. EINSTEIN may be a master-mathematician; but, even he could not tell you how many years a bright girl can add to twenty, and still go on being "just eighteen."

* * *

When a girl closes her eyes and sighs, it is not a sign that she is unhappy, but merely that she is trying to warm over the memory of some man's kiss.

You can usually discover whether a man is "your kind" or not, by his reaction to a beautiful sunset—whether it inspires him to poetry, makes him talk real estate, or only reminds him that it's almost dinner time.

HELEN ROWLAND

To a man, the most interesting woman in the world is the one who falls in love with him, every now and then—not the one who remains in love with him all the time.

The woman who charms a man with her cooking is not the one who serves him a fancy seven-course dinner, but the one who can broil a steak so temptingly that he forgets that there is such a thing in the world as pate de fois gras, stuffed celery or an alligator pear.

When a girl gives her heart to a man, these days, he is rather careful to glance at the price-tag, first.

The Lord may have endowed a man with a face that could be NO woman's "dream;" but, at least he has the sense not to paint it up so that it looks like a nightmare.

If the skirts keep "going down," the street cleaning department will soon be lolling back and smiling in its sleeve, while the women sweep up Main street, and the reformers will be raving against germ-catchers instead of against man-catchers.

Love's Awakening

A Continuation of Love's Embers

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Schemes to Reunite Noel and Mary.

NOEL VERITZEN was so bewildered and so thoroughly miserable that I felt the need of something to relieve the soberness of our conversation. So I laughed lightly at his stammered objection to my suggestion that he play devoted swain to Princess Olina for the present.

"Your father's son should be able to act a role without any difficulty," I told him. "I have not changed my mind about your marrying the princess. You are not going to take so absurd a step. But if you follow my advice you are going to pretend to be her devoted admirer as long as Mary is engaged to Prince Georges. You will also be as temperamental and American and masterful as you can feign to be. Will you let me tell you my reason for asking this of you?"

"Yes, yes," he said eagerly, with a face suddenly brightened. "I think I begin to see."

"We older people in the secret," I began, "have seen for some time that these two royal young people are living in a sort of Graustark-Prisoner of Zenda dream which cannot possibly last, but which is very real to them just now. You see, before the royal family of Transvania visited here, Prince Georges and Princess Olina, while not sweethearts, were very good friends indeed, and both were bitterly resentful at her mother's plan to marry her to Georges' uncle, the old and ugly king of Trees.

"Then when Olina disappeared upon the very day set for the return of the royal family to Transvania—it's a long and romantic story which she no doubt has told you—Prince Georges was sent secretly by Olina's mother to hunt for her. But when he found her, he also saw Mary, and partly from loyalty to Olina, partly because he also wished to stay over here, he reported that he could not find the princess, and has himself managed to get away from the ken of his own court. But it can only be a matter of time before they are discovered, and I would like to hasten matters so that they would go back voluntarily before there is any publicity concerning them."

Noel shivered at the word and I think he visioned Mary the center of the pitiless glare which any person possessing news value has to face in this hectic time.

"Then you think these—betrothals—will—hasten matters," he said.

"I most certainly do," I replied. "If they had gone back to Transvania and Trees without getting themselves into these romantic entanglements with you and Mary, they would always have felt themselves defrauded. But if things work out as I hope, they will go back cured, immune, ready to make each other happy. For I believe that subconsciously they care for each other."

Noel's eyes twinkled, the first and most welcome indication that his mood had lightened.

"Then Mary and I might be dubbed attacks of mental measles and mumps?" he said.

"Exactly," I returned, "and I want both attacks to be hard ones, with convalescence a bit drawn out. Then we shall be sure of immunity. And the whole thing rests upon your shoulders. You must see that Olina tires of an adoring but typically American sweetheart, while at the same time making Mary believe that you are infected with the same longing for court life which is affecting her. Can you do this?"

He squared his shoulders, and looked at me steadily.

"I can do anything," he said simply, "if I can win Mary."

"It will be difficult for you," I said, "I am afraid Mary herself will make it hard. She wants to see you tomorrow morning, and I have promised her to ask you to come over to the house."

"To see me!" he repeated, and I saw his fingers clench the edge of the table.

"But I am not going to let you do it," I said quickly. "She does not know that we are dining together tonight but I am going to tell her when I get home that you asked me to dine with you that you might tell me of your engagement. I shall be mendacious enough to let her imagine that you are quite happy, and I want you to tell me now that you do not think it wise to see her."

"I—I—hate to send her a message like that—" he said tremulously, "but I am in your hands absolutely." He repeated the words I had given him, and then leaned back in his chair as if spent.

"You are taking a lot of trouble for me, Mrs. Graham," he said gratefully.

"This is less than nothinng," I said emphatically, "and I am sure in a few weeks you and I will be enjoying a little dinner of celebration over the fortunate outcome of this 'international romance,' as Mr. Underwood calls it."

He smiled with an effort.

"I hope so, I am sure," he said, "but while the prince and princess may go back home cured, there is one person who cannot be changed. Have you forgotten my father?"

Saturday, August 10.

FAIRLY active and interesting situations and events are foreshown by the benefic influence of the lunar transits. Although quick, alert and resourceful mentally, there will also be a tendency to diligence, practical effort and serious thinking. Industry, labor and new projects should gain good ground, although the financial issues are not definitely assured for the moment. Funds should be handled conservatively, with fair future prospects.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a fairly progressive year, with firm foundations laid rather than high immediate returns. But much will depend upon wise handling of funds, preferably in substantial investments rather than speculation. The judgment should be dependable and the insight shrewd.

A child born on this day may have a quick mind with far vision and deep insight and as well be resourceful, profound and discreet. It should be equipped for success attained through its own efforts and endowments.

When Romance Fades

Drawn by Dorothy Flack

WHY is it that when we finally gain the goal of Romance toward which we have so long been striving, that it somehow slips through our fingers and fades into nothingness? How often have you asked yourself this same question and found a reason for it in every way but the right way. You won't admit that you are at fault! Oh, no! The blame for the broken romance always is given to someone or something else. And this is because you won't admit the truth, even to yourself.

In your selfish jealousy you flaunt your romance before the eyes of all beholders and hold up a warning hand telling all and sundry that the beloved belongs to YOU and you will brook no interference. Then starts the campaign! The nasty little nagging jealous campaign that ends in disaster. And you weep and wail and find no fault with yourself, only with the beloved who has failed you.

Love is Faith and Trust and Confidence! If these be lacking then it is not love. And a nagging sweetheart is never a real sweetheart. So watch yourself. See that the nagging words which rise to your lips are suppressed. For so surely as you give way to your jealous suspicions, usually founded on nothing, just so surely will you lose what Life holds dearest to you—your Romance.

Quarrels and "make-ups" can't last forever, and with each succeeding one something of the loveliness of the romance disappears. So take heed and stop before it's too late!

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Food, Well Kept, Is a Health Precaution

THERE are few things of greater importance to health than proper preservation of the food stuffs. Bacterial or germ growths are so rapid that within a few hours a valuable food may be changed into a violent poison.

DR. COPELAND

There are many factors involved in the proper preservation of food. Of course, the first one is temperature.

Unfortunately, not all foods are well preserved at one stated temperature. For example, fruits that contain a high percentage of sugar require a lower temperature for their preservation than sourer or acid fruits. Likewise, sweet cherries require a lower temperature than sour cherries.

But this rule appears not to prevail when it comes to vegetables. For instance, if sweet potatoes are kept in a temperature below 45 degrees, serious damage results. On the other hand, Irish potatoes can be brought down to a temperature of 33 degrees without harm.

It is interesting to find what temperature does to bananas. The higher the temperature the more quickly they ripen. There must be ample ventilation, however, in order that discoloration of the skin may be prevented.

The citrus fruits require a very dry place, particularly when the refrigeration is first started. It seems important for the skin to be dried out thoroughly. After this, moisture is needed to prevent shrinkage.

It is difficult to store grapes for long periods of time. In order to maintain the delicious grape flavor the temperature must be kept above 38 degrees. If held in storage for a long time at a lower temperature the grapes will be tasteless.

Since such a high temperature is necessary for their proper preservation, it is important to select the grapes with great care. If they are bruised or otherwise damaged, high temperature will cause rapid spoilage.

It is difficult to preserve pears and they will not keep long in storage. If they are overripe, they will stay good for a few days only. The important thing is to store them before they have ripened.

Cherries can be kept for a good while. At 38 degrees, sour cherries will keep for two or three weeks. Sweet cherries can be kept much longer, but, as I have said before, the temperature must be lower, certainly not more than 38 degrees, and better if less.

Freshly picked strawberries, blackberries and raspberries can be kept for a couple of weeks. But it is necessary that the berries be dry and solid to begin with, and a temperature of 32 degrees must be maintained.

It is possible to keep peaches in storage for some time at a temperature of from 35 to 40 degrees. They will keep from three to six weeks, provided they are free from the "brown rot."

Cantaloupes are best kept in a temperature of 35 to 40 degrees; cranberries from 33 to 36 degrees; and plums from 32 to 36 degrees. At these temperatures they keep very well.

I hope these suggestions will help you to have wholesome food. Nothing is more essential to the avoidance of hot weather illness than proper preservation of fruits.

Hot Weather Advice to Mothers of Babies.

LITTLE babies suffer from heat just as grown persons do. Indeed they suffer more than grown-ups do.

The first thing to bear in mind in hot weather is that too much clothing will cause the baby to sweat. This produces irritation of the skin and great discomfort.

The clothes for a baby should be simple things. They should be made of smooth and unstarched materials. The delicate skin of a baby is easily scratched or otherwise irritated.

Don't think about how the baby looks in its garments. Have them loose enough to permit free movement of the arms and legs. Think of the comfort of the child and not what the neighbors will say about its garments.

Don't have the diapers so big and heavy and clumsy that they crowd the child, and interfere with its free movements. Many an infant is made miserable by the wrong sort of diapers.

Rubber diapers should not be worn for a long period of time. They retain the moisture and irritate the skin. If used at all any time during the day, it should be for a short time only.

Answers of Health Queries

T. Y. Q.—What is the cause and cure for a painful knee? I have a weakness all over the body and have suffered with night sweats all winter. I am very nervous.

A.—Probably due to a rheumatic condition. Massage and application of heat should be helpful. The weakness is very likely due to infection and run-down condition generally. The latter would also be responsible for the night sweats and nervousness. Have a careful examination. Try to improve your health in general.

J. L. Q.—What is the cause of hives?

A.—A nervous condition, constipation, food poisoning and, in some instances, a kidney condition may be responsible for hives.

Samuel D. Q.—What causes a peculiar feeling around the heart? The heart seems to stop for a second.

A.—Have your heart examined.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Costume for the Informal Wedding

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: 1. Must one wear a hat with a sleeveless chiffon dress when one is married at the minister's home with just two witnesses? There will be a reception later.

2. Or at a small home wedding should one wear a hat with the style of dress mentioned above?

YES. And it would be very much better taste not to wear a sleeveless dress for this informal occasion. Usually the traveling suit is worn, or a dress of similar type.

2. This is as the bride wishes. Either is correct.

Announcing a Secret Marriage.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: Is it correct to send out marriage announcements after having been married two months, but having kept the marriage a secret for that time? E. R.

THIS isn't considered particularly good form to send out announcements so long after the ceremony has been performed, and when the wedding has been so unconventional. Such belated announcements serve too much to emphasize the unconventionality of the marriage. It is better, in this case to tell those relatives and friends who live near enough to tell, and to write informal notes to those farther away. The news will be spread fast enough, and then the people who matter in the lives of the couple will know of the marriage.

GARAGE ROBBED BY BOY, CHARGE

RIDGWAY, Pa., Aug. 9.—James Fannin was held up yesterday by a neighbor boy. Fannin is night man at the Ridgway Garage. Some time after midnight, he said, Jerome Fingado came to the garage and asked for five gallons of gasoline. In payment he gave a $10 bill. While Fannin was making change from the cash register young Fingado poked a revolver into his side and demanded that he hold up his hands.

Fannin took the holdup as a joke, but was soon convinced the boy was serious. Fingado went through the cash register and took $240 in cash and checks.

As soon as Fingado had gone, Fannin called the state police, and telephone messages were sent to nearby towns. About half an hour later Fingado was arrested near Brockway. He is in the Ridgway jail.

"I GAINED FIVE POUNDS; OWE ALL TO NEW KONJOLA"

Pittsburgh Man Sick Since 1928—Now Free of Stomach Trouble and Nervousness.

Konjola has become the most talked-of medicine in Pittsburgh simply because it makes good; because it wins victory after victory over those stubborn and obstinate cases that have defied and resisted all other medicines and treatments tried.

MR. C. H. DAVIS

Yet it is not surprising that Konjola is such a success, for it is really 32 medicines skillfully blended into one, and of these 32 ingredients, 22 are the juices of roots and herbs of known medicinal value. All who suffer and who would be well again are urged to call on the Konjola Man, who is at the Dow Drug Store (formerly McCulloch's), Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, Pittsburgh, and hear what Konjola has done and is doing. Let the experiences of others be your guide. Take, as a typical example of Konjola at work, the case of Mr. C. H. Davis, 311 Parker Street, Pittsburgh, who said to the Konjola Man a few days ago:

"In my opinion there is no medicine in the world like Konjola. I have a good right to say that for this was the first and only medicine that restored my health after I had suffered since December, 1928.

"Until about four weeks ago my system was so upset and rundown that I steadily lost strength and energy. I was underweight and suffered daily from stomach trouble. Meals ceased to be a pleasure because the food failed to digest. Practically everything I ate fermented quantities of gas that bloated me dreadfully. During the night my sleep was disturbed at all hours by irregular bladder actions. Nervousness was the natural result of these ailments. I was so weak that I could hardly work and to my distress I found that I was getting worse every day.

"As I said before, I suffered until about four weeks ago. At that time I started the Konjola treatment. My friends persuaded me to give it a trial, stating that they knew it would help me; that it was what I should have had in the first place. Well, it turned out to be exactly that. I gained five pounds and owe it all to Konjola. In four weeks' time all my ailments were swept away. My digestion was restored; my kidneys were strengthened and my nerves were calmed and soothed. I have greater strength, energy and vigor. I did not realize that a medicine could work the wonders that Konjola did. I praise it with every breath."

Konjola contains no hazardous ingredients, for it is all pure, wholesome medicine, bringing lasting and abundant relief, not mere temporary betterment.

The Konjola Man is at the Dow Drug Store (formerly McCulloch's), Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, Pittsburgh, where he is meeting the public daily, introducing and explaining the merits of this new and different medicine.

There is also a Konjola Man at Dow's Drug Store, Diamond and Smithfield — also Dow's Drug Store, 5939 Penn Avenue, East Liberty.

Wide Variety of Features Offered on Radio

By DARRELL V. MARTIN,
Sun-Telegraph Radio Editor.

An odd combination of circumstances in the booking of programs seems to favor Friday night with a variety of entertainment.

On what other night, for instance, do the ether lanes carry the listener from the environment of the Bowery to light opera, from the circus tent to the musical stage? Or what radio night furnishes so many wanderers, with Mary and Bob, the Darktown Wanderers and the family from Onyx, Pa., seeing their way through Europe? "Blossom Time," with a select cast of KDKA's Philco Players, will be KDKA's presentation at 9:30 o'clock. The action gets well under way in this first episode and you will appreciate the charming melodies.

Helen Greenwood

The old Welsh air, "All Through the Night" will bring the Cities Service Hour to a close. Other highlights of this program will be "My Isle of Golden Dreams" and "Song of the Volga Boatmen" by the Cavaliers, WCAE at 8 p. m.

"Pale Moon" will be sung by Helen Maree Greenwood, soprano, during the KDKA Little Symphony concert at 6 o'clock.

We Now Present

Smoking will be taboo in the luxurious new studios of WJAS. Artists may smoke their pipes of peace in a separate room adjoining the three studios, but woe betide the gentleman who spills tobacco ashes on those imported rugs!

WTIC, now on a clear channel of 282.2 meters with a powerful new transmitter, would like to know how they are being received in Pittsburgh. If any comments, send them to WTIC, Hartford, Conn.

"Isn't Pittsburgh the home of broadcasting?" asked Quin Hall the other day. Expanding our chest to the limit, we replied, "You bet." Whereupon Mr. Hall, being a thoroughbred New Yorker, expatiated on the wonders of Gotham broadcasting stations. We retaliated with the honest statement that the steel for those station towers, the delicate instruments in their control rooms and at least half of the vital equipment are the products of Pittsburgh mills and shops. We might add that more and more every day Mr. Hall is becoming a Pittsburgher.

Some Scotch came into Pittsburgh from Cleveland this week in the person of Innes Harris. The Highlander served several years with WTAM and hereafter will be the technical writer for the press relations department of KDKA. A fine chap . . . and that statement still goes despite the queer spelling of his first name.

Leo Yoder, operator at WCAE, has returned from the old homestead in Shipshewannah, Ind., where he spent a vacation harvesting and swimming. "How do you spell that name?" we asked. Leo smiled. "Bet you don't get it right in the paper," he replied. And we'll be a ki-yoting Indian if we do.

Jean Goldkette's 29-piece Victor Recording Orchestra and an all-star lineup of entertainers will be heard over WJAS next Wednesday night in a Chevrolet celebration from Detroit.

We question that the A. & P. Gypsies acted wisely in abandoning classic music for "songs of a popular demand." Without the usual signature of "Two Guitars" and the theme song, "Gypsy Sweetheart," we hardly recognized them over WCAE this week. The change in policy must be based on a national survey, for we dare say it was a radical move after six years of uninterrupted broadcasting of classics and semi-classics which certainly had a large following. We may be wrong—and we hope we are—for the second oldest radio feature in America has been one of our favorites.

En route from Cincinnati to the Kentucky Mountains, Mary and Bob stop over at an old plantation, where the hospital colonel entertains them in spacious Southern manner.

Finds Wife Pirate.
A broken-down soldier of fortune finds the man who ran away with his wife in this episode. Through the conversations at the little, round tables of the Bowery cafe, the rendezvous of gunmen and the riff-raff that linger and pass on in the most colorful section of the capital of the world, it develops that Robert MacGovern, formerly of Virginia, and lately of the highways and outposts of the world, is looking for a man he has never seen. This man long ago broke up a happy plantation life by carrying away MacGovern's wife. How he recognizes the scoundrel by a scar on his hand and the peculiar way he holds his cards while playing poker will be divulged in the radio dramatization.

"Blossom Time."
The first act of "Blossom Time," a musical comedy in three acts, with music adapted from the melodies of Franz Schubert and Heinrich Berte by Sigmund Romberg and with lyrics by Dorothy Donnelly and Dorothy Greenbank Muriel Wilson, Colin O'More and a supporting cast.
In the first act, Franz Schubert, the composer, receives his friends, the poet Francis, the singer Vogel, and the painters Schwind and Kupel, in an old house and serves for them a delightful picnic al fresco. Then Annette, Jeanette and Nanette, three daughters of a rich Mr. Muhl, arrive. Jeanette and Nanette are having a love affair with Brunel and Binder, whom they come to join.
Their father arrives in time to surprise them, but the poet Francis explains the situation by saying the girls have come to seek singing lessons from Schubert. This leads to a sentimental meeting between Schubert and Annette. The ungainly composer makes no impression on the fair Annette, while the elegance of the poet, Francis, also impresses Jeanette. The artists try to get Muhl's consent to the marriage of his two eldest daughters. The old gentleman is then escorted home.

By Sea or Air?
Whether the Jones family should go to London by channel boat and be seasick, or venture for the first time of their lives into an airplane is the subject of discussion in tonight's episode. Aunt Letty has been scorned by the Italian Count and refuses to linger in Paris to be afflicted by memories, and Mrs. Jones is anxious to leave Paris because she feels that London is nearer home. While the question of the mode of travel is being discussed, a serious problem arises in connection with Jim and the pretty girl from the boat. Moreover, Aunt Letty departs for a moonlight stroll with Mr. Blake, and Mrs. Jones decides that the life of a simple American abroad is so complicated that she would be willing to fly to Onyx, Pennsylvania. She knows that only there will the Jones family be reunited and once more safely under her wing.

Fruits Supply Important Vitamins and Minerals

Berries contain considerable valuable fruit acids. Most berries supply vitamins and minerals and increase intestinal peristalsis.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
Former Health Commissioner of New York City.
United States Senator from New York.

WE OFTEN ask ourselves, just what is a well-balanced diet?

Persons in good health should have a daily diet of meat or some protein once a day in a moderate portion. They require some food of bulk, such as vegetables; some raw food, such as greens; some cereal, fruit, and milk. Of course there are persons who need a more restricted diet, but it is essential to health that most people should have such a variety of food each day.

At this time of the year fresh fruits are available for nearly everybody, both as to price and variety. Fruits are only slightly nutritious, but they give a relish to other foods and increase the intestinal peristalsis. They supply vitamins and minerals.

VALUABLE ACIDS

Among the berries, the strawberry is perhaps the most liked. But the cultivation and demand for both red and black raspberries, blackberries, gooseberries, huckleberries and currants is enormous in this country.

These all contain a considerable amount of valuable fruit acids. Citric acid constitutes 90 per cent or more of "non-volatile acids" found in lemons, oranges, pomegranates, raspberries, strawberries, loganberries, blueberries and currants.

Fruits vary as to their digestibility. Stewed fruits are more easily digested than raw fruits. Some of the easily digested fruits are oranges, lemons, grapes and peaches. Pears are more digestible than apples, because of their softer flesh and more tender skin. Peaches are very wholesome and digestible and contain less sugar than most fruits.

STRAWBERRY FLAVOR EXCELS

The cultivation of the strawberry began in the fifteenth or sixteenth century. It is grown in most places where the climate is not too warm. Strawberries grow wild over a large area in America, Europe and Asia. Although much has been done to cultivate them to the present large, luscious fruits of most attractive appearances, none can equal the wild strawberry in flavor.

They have mild diuretic and laxative properties. One peculiarity about strawberries is that some cannot eat them without having symptoms of indigestion, such as hives or other unpleasant digestive upsets.

Most appetizing dishes for desserts are made by using strawberries, raspberries and blackberries in ices and sherberts, or ice creams or pies. Served raw and chilled, with a small amount of sugar, and cream if desired, they make a refreshing addition to a meal; or they may be combined with other fruits in cocktails or fruit cups. Delicious drinks are also made from these fruits.

Very attractive canned small fruits are found on the market in large quantities. Various canned berries are very palatable and quite delicious. Although not eaten during the summer season so much as in the winter months, canned berries may be used to advantage in fruit drinks and desserts of various kinds.

Police in Pajamas Arrest Mate, Thief Free

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—(INS.) At a cry of "robber" everybody tumbled out of bed, and when the excitement was over two policemen in pajamas discovered they had arrested another policeman, and the thief had flown.

The commotion started when Policeman J. S. Harris caught a man stealing tires. The thief ran and Harris started shooting into the air.

Aroused from sleep, Policemen Sullivan and Bishard donned holsters over pajamas and scampered forth. Seeing Harris firing, they grabbed and overpowered him. By the time Harris, in civilian attire, had explained who he was, the thief was far, far away.

Prudence Penny's Recipes

Honey Dew Melon.
Filet of Beef.
Spanish Rice. Baked Eggplant.
Waldorf Salad.
Carrot Sponge.

FRUIT of any kind is always my idea of the perfect entree. I think that most people agree with me and so it is always safe to have a first course of fruit. Just now honeydew melons are at their very best.

A generous slice is certain to start the dinner in proper style.

This is my favorite recipe for filet of beef. Buy five pounds of filet of beef, wipe it and remove the fat and skin. Fold the thin ends over and fasten them with a skewer or string.

Put pieces of butter on the upper side, season with salt and pepper, place in roasting pan in hot oven from ¾ to 1 hour. Baste three or four times, adding hot water if necessary. Remove the skewer. Serve on a hot platter and garnish with fancy cut vegetables.

FOR a real treat, serve Spanish rice. Here is how you prepare it. Melt 3 tablespoons of butter, stir in 1 small onion, minced, and 1 green pepper, minced. Cook until they are softened. Add 1 cup rice and cook a few minutes more, until it begins to turn yellow. Add 3 cups of stewed tomato, 2 teaspoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt and a little pepper.

Put over hot water, cover and steam until the rice is tender and has absorbed the tomato juice. That will require about 45 minutes.

TO make the baked eggplant just as tasty as possible, parboil it first until it is tender but not soft. Cut it in half crosswise with a sharp knife. Scrape out the inside, but do not break the skin.

Heat 1 tablespoon butter, add ¼ onion, cut fine the scraped eggplant, add 2 tablespoons bread crumbs, salt and pepper to taste and an egg yolk. Mix well together, refill the shells, place in dripping pan in oven.

Baste with butter or sprinkle cracker crumbs on top with bits of butter.

I hope that you like Waldorf salad as much as I do. It requires 1 cup of diced apple, 1 cup diced celery, ½ cup broken walnut meats folded together and served with French dressing on lettuce leaves.

YOU'RE curious about the carrot sponge, aren't you? If you've never tasted it, you have a delightful surprise in store for you.

Soak 2 tablespoons of gelatine in cold water, dissolve it over heat and add it to 1 cup of hot milk. Set aside until it begins to harden around the edges.

Beat with egg beater, add 1 cup grated raw carrots, salt, vanilla, the stiffly beaten white of an egg. Turn into mould and serve with whipped cream.

EGGPLANT

EGGPLANT is a delicious vegetable, and can be served in a variety of ways. Possibly the most popular way is to fry it; maybe because that's such an easy way to prepare it, and maybe it is because frying adds such a crisp, brown, delicious crust to the eggplant.

To fry it, you wash the eggplant well, dry and pare it. Cut it in thin slices with salt and pepper, cover with a heavy dish or weight to press out the juice and allow it to stand for an hour and a half. Dredge well with flour, and fry slowly in butter until crisp and a golden brown. Serve quite hot.

ORANGE PUREE—Place cups orange juice in a saucepan. When thoroughly heated, add 1 teaspoon corn starch mixed with two tablespoons cold water. Cook slowly until clear. Add ½ cup sugar and 1 teaspoon grated orange rind. Serve ice cold in sherbet cups.

* * *

SCALLOPED CORNED BEEF—Chop 1 stalk celery and 2 slices onion. Cook together in 1

"It's So Convenient to Handle"

What a comfort to have a sugar packaged so that it pours easily! What a nuisance to have it any other way.

Jack Frost Granulated Sugar is the only sugar on the market with this clever pouring device.

Moreover, Jack Frost Granulated Sugar is made of 100% pure cane sugar. It is clean, white and finer. Pour some out of the blue box and examine it for yourself. You will see how uniformly fine it is.

It is always wise to buy Jack Frost Granulated Sugar packed in sanitary cartons for protection instead of bulk sugar you know nothing about.

Remember, there's a Jack Frost Sugar for every purpose:

CONFECTIONERS POWDERED
GRANULATED TABLET BROWN

Don't ask your grocer for "sugar". Insist upon Jack Frost Sugar in the Blue Box.

cup medium white sauce. Cut 2 cups cooked corned beef in cubes, and put in a shallow baking dish. Add the sauce, sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs and brown in the oven.

RUSSIAN SALAD—Dice ¼ cup each of cooked carrots, cooked beets and sweet gherkins. Add ½ teaspoon grated horseradish and mix all into ½ cup French dressing. Serve on lettuce leaves.

STUFFED CABBAGE—Season a pound of raw chopped beef with salt and pepper and the juice of a small onion. Add ½ cup cooked rice. Soak 8 large cabbage leaves in hot water for a few minutes to soften them. Roll part of the meat mixture in each leaf. Place in a kettle with 2 large tomatoes, 1 chopped onion, 2 tablespoonfuls vinegar and 2 tablespoonfuls sugar. Add a little water and let the cabbage simmer and stew until it is tender and well browned.

STUFFED BAKED POTATOES—Cut six large baked potatoes in half lengthwise and scoop out the centers. Mash thoroughly. Add ¼ pound grated cheese to 1-3 cup hot milk and beat until smooth. Mix with potatoes, add 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper and ⅛ teaspoon paprika, and whip until light and creamy. Refill the potato shells and bake in a hot oven for 10 minutes.

STUFFED CABBAGE LEAVES—To one cup of chopped beef, add one chopped onion and a tablespoon of chopped green pepper. Mix well, season with salt and pepper and roll in large cabbage leaves which have been soaked in hot water to soften them. Fasten the rolls together with toothpicks. Brown them in a little beef drippings in the bottom of a kettle. Add 1 cup stock and 1 cup stewed tomatoes. Let simmer for one hour. Thicken the gravy with 1 tablespoon flour and serve.

MASKED LAMB CHOPS sound rather elaborate, but are really quite simple to prepare, and they make the basis of a most interesting and attractive meal. Broil the chops—but not too well done—then envelop them entirely in well-seasoned mashed potatoes to which a finely chopped canned pimento has been added; smooth the potato neatly all over the hops with a knife, then dip in beaten egg and in fine bread crumbs buttered. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, arrange in a well-greased dripping pan, and bake about 15 minutes in a hot oven to brown. Serve with bechamel sauce, spinach and jellied tomato salad.

DEVILED TOMATOES—Peel and cut four tomatoes in slices. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Dredge with flour and saute in butter. Pour over them a sauce made as follows:

Cream 4 tablespoons butter and add 2 teaspoons powdered sugar, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, ½ teaspoon salt, a few grains cayenne, 1 slightly beaten egg, the yolk of 1 hard-boiled egg rubbed to a paste and 2 tablespoons vinegar. Cook in double boiler until the mixture thickens.

CREAMED TUNA FISH—Remove the skin and bones from one large can tuna fish. Heat the fish (but do not boil) in 2 cups medium white sauce and add 1 tablespoon chopped parsley. Tuna fish may also be heated in a sauce made of 1 cup thin cream, thickened with 3 tablespoons flour and seasoned with salt and pepper.

New Charge Filed Against Driver

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Aug. 9.—Allan Eagon, of Washington, Pa., arrested here on charges of hit-and-run driving, larceny of a motor vehicle and driving while intoxicated, had another charge added to the list when he was ordered held for court for assault and battery preferred against him by Albert Day, of Waynesburg. He was released on bail. Day was one of the three victims struck by Eagon during a ride, which started in Washington and ended in Waynesburg, 22 miles away.

Man Found Dead, Wrists Slashed

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Aug. 9.—Andrew Kuhne, 57, former resident of this place, was found dead in a bathtub of his apartment in Port Hope, Canada. The wrists were slashed, apparently with a razor. The man's bedroom was in disorder and there were blood stains on the bed clothing.

Police advanced the suicide theory, but William Brooks, landlord, told police Kuhne had no razor. Kuhne was manager of the Port Hope Mat and Manufacturing Company.

JUBILEE OF LIGHT SLATED HERE IN OCTOBER

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

by HAVEY J. BOYLE

BERLIN, Germany.

THE most unusual place in Berlin—and it is new—is a place called the Haus Vaterland in Potsdamer Place. It is a building of modern design. The first floor carries a large restaurant. You pay a mark (about a quarter) to get into the building and this entitles you to visit the various rooms inside, all of which house cabarets of various nations. America, Austria, Germany, France, Spain and various other countries are represented in the rooms. The rooms are filled with parties, busily engaged in eating, drinking and dancing. The orchestra in one room sang as well as played and after each number a waiter dutifully presented each member with what seemed to be a gallon of beer.

A bus ride around the city will show you the various statues of the national heroes, mainly the generals. There are palaces and royal stables and other contraptions of royalties which now are owned by the republic.

A one-day visit, of course, is not sufficient to even scrape the surface, but it seemed here that Berlin in the matter of beauty is far behind Paris, but well-ahead of most other cities. Parks abound and the streets are clean, but the German eye for architectural beauty favors ornate heaviness.

But here, as in Paris, the height of buildings is limited, and this makes the city attractive.

THE guide we had was of little use. His English was poor and he was not well-informed about the historicity of the places we passed. In Paris we had Henri, who, like Pathe, knew all and saw all, but in Berlin the gentleman in charge of the bus had no conception of German history. He did manage to point out a bank where he said he deposited his tips. I noted he said this in English and did not repeat it in German.

You don't have to tip in Berlin. That is you tip, but it is made painless as they add 10 per cent to your bill. Even the taxis make this service charge and the drivers do not expect anything beyond it. Once I stepped beyond the usual taxi tip in Berlin. In riding along Unter der Linden the ribbon which holds my straw hat on (it is fastened to the hat and to the shirt), broke and my hat blew off. The taxi driver chased after it and of course got a few extra pfennings, as we say over here.

WHEN we decided to leave Berlin we inquired about an airplane back to Le Bourget in Paris. It developed that the only plane leaving on that day was a single motor plane which left at 8 o'clock in the morning, made three stops, and landed in Paris at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. So we spent practically the whole day in the air, barring stops at Frankfort, another place that is very hard to spell, and at Nancy. There was lunch at all these stoops.

The single motored plane was less noisy than the triple motored plane we had driven in to Berlin, but somehow or other I'll take the noise. We didn't get a shock or a thrill, but there seems to be more comfort to three motors than you find in the single motored. But once again we were in the hands of a cool bird, a German, who must have written the book on driving a plane. He took off and landed with the skill of Hoppe touching the billiard balls.

We flew over the battlefields and there was some food for thought, as you sat there in the plane, in knowing that the man who was running your plane some 10 years ago rode the same air, when he was being shot at by enemy sharpshooters. Flying without anyone popping at him made him appear to say: "It's a shame to take the money for this job."

Between Wednesday and Friday we had spent some 13½ hours in the air. The round trip cost $80, not counting, of course, the knickknacks and animals crackers in Berlin.

AMBRIDGE RAID YIELDS RUM, ARRESTS

Numerous Places Visited In Down-River Industrial Town; Other Spots Are Hit

Confiscation of liquor and numerous arrests were reported by prohibition agents, constables and police who last night again raided resorts in Ambridge. It was the second visit in two weeks. Last week the officers were said to have searched prominent clubs in the section.

Thomas Pappas, 72 Beaver avenue; Thomas Sczpik, 348 Maplewood street, and George Scherscher, 410 Maplewood avenue, were said to have been arrested when agents found liquor in their stores.

Liquor was confiscated at 1811 Duss street, agents declared, but no arrests were made. Arrest of the owner will take place later, it was said. Several places were also reported searched in McKees Rocks, but no seizures or arrests were made.

Agents found a cutting plant in Reserve Township, it was said, and Fred Fuller, 2345 Mt. Troy road, was arrested. Samuel Bruckner was arrested in a building in Roberts street when a small quantity of liquor was seized, it was reported.

FETE MARKS PROGRESS OF CITY

Business Leaders Plan for Week Celebration Showing Strides Made in 50 Years

A resume of Greater Pittsburgh's commercial and industrial progress during the last 50 years is to be staged here by the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, Light's Golden Jubilee, as it will be known, will be observed during the week of October 21.

A. L. Humphrey, president of the Westinghouse Air Brake Company, is to be general chairman. The plans contemplate according full due to every phase of local development in that period.

F. R. Phillips, senior vice president of the Philadelphia Company, has been named general vice chairman. Others who will serve on the executive committee are James Rae, president of the Chamber of Commerce; L. C. Bihler, H. L. Johnston, W. S. Linderman, R. S. McCarty, Joseph McKinley, J. C. McQuiston, William B. Rodgers, M. R. Scharff and W. B. Spellmire.

President Hoover is to serve as honorary chairman of a national committee which is carrying out the observation throughout the entire country and celebrations are planned for virtually every large city and town in the country. The jubilee week will mark the invention of the electric light.

However, in Pittsburgh, the celebration will be in recognition of all the district's progress since 1879.

SAFECRACKER SHOT FLEEING

Detectives today questioned John Conley, 32, a Negro, of Wylie avenue, captured last night after he was shot in the right leg, in an effort to determine how many safe cracking "jobs" he and his companions have done.

Conley said that he and Russell Bridgeport, of Shomin street, and Eugene Thompson, 30, of Frankstown avenue, both Negroes, entered eight places, the location of which they were able to identify, and scores of other stores, the location of which they were not sure, police declared.

Detectives said that today Conley promised to take them to other places they had entered here. The Harry Hepner store, at 603 Wylie avenue; F. W. Woolworth Company's store, 600 Smithfield street, and another at 1323 Carson street; the Meisel Tire Company, Webster avenue and Bigelow boulevard; Keller Coal Company, Hamilton avenue; W. J. Fournier, gas station, 1325 Irwin avenue; Graff Brothers Hardware Company, 6912 Penn avenue, and the W. A. Selling & Sons Company, 1704 Beaver avenue, are the places to which Conley confessed entering.

Conley was shot after he refused to heed the command of Detective Walter Monoghan to stop. Detective Joseph Linden, Monaghan's partner, grabbed Conley as he fell to the street. The other two men were arrested during an investigation last month.

WOMAN HURT IN DORMONT FIRE

One woman was slightly injured and several persons were forced into the street by smoke which filled their apartments during a fire in the Canary Cottage Tea Room at 3265 West Liberty avenue, Dormont, early today.

The injured woman is Mrs. Julia Pritchard. She missed her footing and fell while making her way through a smoke-filled hallway leading from her apartment on the third floor.

Frank Kiefer, of 1201 Illinois avenue, a former Dormont fireman, rescued a woman from the second floor and then fought his way through the smoke to the Pritchard apartment and rescued four canaries. Five more birds were taken from the tea room, while eight were suffocated. The damage was estimated at $3,000.

TAXICAB DRIVER BEATEN, ROBBED

John Anderson, 2335 Fifth avenue, a taxicab driver, was robbed and beaten by two men on a lonely section of Stanton avenue, Morningside, early today.

He told police he was engaged to drive the men from a downtown corner "to the engine house on Stanton avenue."

Near the fire station one of them told him to stop the cab. When he complied they dragged him to the street, then beat and robbed him.

He drove his cab to the Forty-third police station, where he swooned after telling his story.

Police took him to St. Francis Hospital, where it was said he suffered from cuts of the head, face and body. He was unable to give a clear description of the assailants.

P. R. R. SUED IN DEATH

Suit for $40,000 damages against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has been filed in Common Pleas court by Mrs. Mary G. Fogarty, of Haysville because of the death of her husband who was killed at the Haysville crossing August 11, 1928. Mrs. Fogarty says in her statement of claim that her husband was not warned by a watchman or gates of the approach of the train that crashed into his automobile, killing him instantly.

FIRST FIGHTING FISH HERE

Fighting chickens in this district, which have provided much entertainment for the sporting world, had best look to their laurels, as their place may be taken by Siamese fighting fish.

H. L. Dolde, of 380 Center avenue, West View, one of the county's leading aquarists, has possession of Mr. and Mrs. Blue Betta, the Siamese fish, recently brought here from the upper Cambodia region of Indo China. The fish made the trip in a thermos bottle.

The fish are of a brilliant blue and were found in the lakes by an American sailor. Since they are absolutely new to this section of the world, they are scientifically nameless. The male, Mr. Dolde says, will battle to the death, quite after the fashion of game chickens.

Next month a display for prizes of all tropical fish in Pittsburgh will take place, probably in Phipps Conservatory, Schenley Park, and Mr. Dolde will enter the fighting pair.

Jail Term Suits Him, but Asks Own Months

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Having been there before, Edward Nolan took a few unusual liberties in the court of Judge Joseph W. Schulman yesterday.

"I should give you six months," said the judge after hearing the evidence on a charge of intoxication, "but I'll let you off this time. Next time, however, it will be six months."

"Make it two," Nolan interrupted.

"We'll split the difference," Judge Schulman answered. "How would four months be?"

"O. K. with me, judge. And if you don't mind, I'll pick my own months—September, April, June and November."

BOY MISSING, BEGIN HUNT

Missing from home since Sunday night, parents of William Turlik, of 900 Grant street, Duquesne, today asked the Sun-Telegraph to assist them in finding the boy.

According to his brother, Albert Turlik, the boy had no cause for leaving his home and it is suspected he left with an older boy who is reported missing from the town. William is believed to have started in the direction of Uniontown and police throughout the district have been notified. The missing boy is described as weighing 120 pounds, standing 5 foot 8 inches and has light hair and complexion. He was wearing a gray striped suit and was hatless.

William Turlik.

POLICE SOLVING GANG KILLING

With the arrest late yesterday of Joe Pangallo, 38, said to have figured in several Hill district underworld affairs, Homicide Lieut. David Corbett said today he has completed his first step in solving the fatal shooting of Steve Monastero.

Monastero, underworld leader, who was killed in front of St. John's Hospital, was said by Corbett to have been Pangallo's former "boss."

"Pangallo knows all about it," Corbett declared, "but it's a question whether he will talk."

Detectives arrested Pangallo at his home in McKees Rocks and confiscated three revolvers, a knife and a stiletto. When questioned after his arrest he insisted he knew nothing of the shooting of Monastero.

Pangallo also refused to comment on the three attempts on his life, which have earned for him the cognomen of "ghost" among others whose lives have been attempted. Because of the arrest of Pangallo and that of Sam Monastero, brother of the dead man, detectives believe the gang killings have been halted "for a while at least."

Sam Monastero and Luigi Leone, 30, of Suisman street, bodyguard to the Monastero brothers, were released on $5,000 bond each today pending further developments in the case.

NORTHSIDE FIRE ROUTS 10

Ten employes fled the four-story building occupied by the B. White Furniture Company, East Ohio and Sandusky streets, North Side, early today when fire started in the basement and ate its way towards the first floor.

Dense smoke poured from the building. Traffic was congested for several blocks in each direction as North Side fire departments fought the blaze.

Firemen were forced to don masks as the smoke poured from windows on every floor.

The blaze was confined to the basement and first floor. The fire started from an unknown cause in a rubbish heap in the basement, according to District Fire Chief Shanahan, who estimated the damage at $2,000.

The flames reached the first floor only in a few places, the greater damage to the furniture stock being caused by smoke.

HURT IN BUS, ASKS $15,000

For injuries sustained when a bus in which he was a passenger upset in a ditch, Herbert E. When Miss Bessie Ostrander, 22, of Evans street, McKeesport, cried copiously in Criminal court, the stern look on the face of Judge Harry H. The aunt, who also pleaded guilty, admitted that she had asked the girl to take the things to replenish her bedding supply. Judge Rowand sentenced the aunt to serve 60 days to six months in jail.

COMMISSIONER WORKS

CHARLES C. M'GOVERN JOHN HAAS

In "retirement" for the past few days, County Commissioner McGovern was found hard at work—directing workmen remodeling his home at 1022 Grandview avenue, Mt. Washington.

M'GOVERN GETS ZONE LESSON

County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern has not been in the limelight lately. Investigation today developed that the reason for this is that he is remodeling his home at 1022 Grandview avenue, Mt. Washington.

Interviewed on the premises this morning with carpenters' hammers beating a tattoo accompaniment, McGovern discoursed on what a terrible job it is to remodel or repair a home.

"It must be a tough job to build a building like the Koppers' skyscraper," he remarked, "with all the inspection and official scrutiny that goes into just fixing up a house. It seems that every time I turn around there is an inspector of some kind or other inspecting this, that or the other thing. But it's interesting and while business is slack in the commissioners' office I am putting in most of my time up here on the hill."

VIOLATED ZONE LAW

Told that his inclosed porch had been reported as a violation of the zoning ordinance, McGovern consulted a delegate of the bricklayers' union. He was one of three different labor representatives who stopped at the house during the half hour interview.

He was told that a brick enclosed side porch was not according to some provision of the zoning law.

"Well, that's another wrinkle we will have to iron out," McGovern said smilingly, "that porch has been frame enclosed for the 30 years I've lived here but I'm not surprised that brick doesn't meet some of the specifications."

WORK IS DELAYED

"I started out to get this job done in 26 days but it's more than that now," he continued, "and when contractors ask for extensions of time on county contracts in the future, I will hardly be able to refuse them, for it certainly seems to take a lot of time to put through a job."

Incidentally the commissioner seems to have hit upon an ideal healthful vacation for he looks in the pink of condition and unless one happens to know him would be mistaken for one of the workmen on the job.

MELLON, LESLIE BACK MONDAY

The political pot probably will boil over Monday when former State Chairman W. L. Mellon and Senator Max G. Leslie are scheduled to return to Pittsburgh.

The two, with Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, Senator James J. Coyne and other leaders, face the task of ironing out a complicated political situation.

Chief interest centers in their attitude toward the mayoralty contest, which looms as a three-cornered battle, with Mayor Charles H. Kline, Judge Richard W. Martin and President of Council James F. Malone as the entries. Leslie has declared against Kline, Coyne for him, while Mellon and Armstrong have not announced their position.

An organization slate of Councilmanic candidates and a candidate for sheriff also must be selected. North Side leaders are seeking two places on the Councilmanic slate. They met last night to discuss the matter, but did not make any definite selection.

Councilman Harry A. Little is seeking re-election from that side of the river, but apparently the ward leaders there have not definitely decided to support him.

C. B. Connelley, librarian at the North Side Carnegie Library, and Police Magistrate Edward A. Hough have taken out nominating papers.

STOMACH TROUBLE?

"DIASTATIC DEFICIENCY" AND "TOO MUCH ACID" CAUSE 9 OUT OF EVERY 10 ATTACKS

"DIASTATIC DEFICIENCY" (failure to digest starches), causes more than one-half the cases of stomach trouble. Because of this deficiency, potatoes, breads, macaroni, rice, breakfast cereals and other starchy foods remain in a semi-solid condition and refuse to move on as they should. This stoppage causes INDIGESTION, GAS, FERMENTATION, SOURNESS, SICK HEADACHE and other common troubles.
"TOO MUCH ACID" is the cause of almost all the remaining half of our stomach troubles. It also is the result of fermentation and excess digestive acids.
ACIDINE, the new discovery, is a perfect anti-acid combined with "Japtase," the most effective known starch digestant, one pound of which will digest more than 800 pounds of starchy foods.
ACIDINE is the FIRST COMPLETE REMEDY for STOMACH TROUBLE—an ANTI-ACID, STARCH DIGESTANT, MEAT DIGESTANT. At the same time it is safe and soothing to the most sensitive stomach. Slightly laxative but not unpleasantly so.

RAILROAD SPAN OPPOSED AT HEARING

Delegation Looking Toward Navigation Insists Ample Clearance Be Provided

Opposition to the construction of bridges across the Youghiogheny River which do not provide proper clearance for navigation above normal pool level was voiced at a meeting in McKeesport yesterday.

J. W. Arras, senior United States engineer, presided at the meeting held in the Council chamber. Among speakers were Congressmen Adam M. Wyant and S. A. Kendall, Frank J. Kirkland, of Boston, assessor for Allegheny County; B. F. Hoffacker, mining engineer and geologist; Albert R. Raymer, assistant vice president and chief engineer of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad; State Senator Harry J. Bell and Joseph E. Stevenson.

COAL EXCHANGE AGREES

Representatives of the Pittsburgh Coal Exchange, who attended the meeting, made no objection to construction of a bridge by the Pittsburgh, McKeesport and Youghiogheny Railroad across the Youghiogheny River at McKeesport with a clearance of only 37.5 feet.

In reviewing the necessity for river improvements, Congressman Wyant said that with the proper canalization of the river, business would increase in such a way that within 10 years population in the Youghiogheny Valley would increase 500 per cent, while the saving per year of estimated shipments by river would be $600,000.

VAST COAL DEPOSITS

Geological surveys, he said, estimate that there are 2,500,000,000 tons of Freeport coal within a distance of 10 miles from the Youghiogheny River between McKeesport and the Pennsylvania-Maryland line.

Mr. Hoffacker said that investigations made 20 years ago did not justify construction of locks and dams in the river. The high content of acid in the stream, he said, is unafvorable for use by steamboats or industrial purposes, and would be a harmful factor to those depending on navigation. With the advent of Deisel-engined boats, he added, bridge heights will not be considered.

HILLTOP CIVIC 'RIOT' DENIED

Mt. Washington police last night responded to a riot call at the Snodgrass School, Augusta and Sweetbrier streets, where nomination for officers of the Duquesne Heights Civic Association was taking place. The police returned after learning that there had been an argument outside the building and that the principals had gone home.

Joseph A. Heyl, president of the Civic association, said the fuss had nothing to do with the meeting.

NEIGHBORHOOD QUARREL

Witnesses said that two men, one of whom had left the school hall for a smoke, had exchanged words and then blows. The fracas, it was said, started when one of the two men had been verbally smitten by a woman, whose children had, or had not, run over the man's lawn some time previously. It was her brother who supplied one pair of the fists.

"On the inside, the meeting, with 300 members present, had adjourned," President Heyl said, "and we were preparing to serve refreshments while the entertainment was going on. The outside squabble did not interfere with the members and their guests, as they enjoyed the festival for an hour and a half after it. Few, if any of them, knew there had been trouble."

NOMINATIONS FOR OFFICE

The following were nominated: President, Mr. Heyl and W. H. McVay; first vice president, Mrs. J. Q. A. Cook; second vice president, Mrs. William F. Madigan; secretary, Earl H. Altenbaugh and Charles Fahey; treasurer, J. A. Campbell. Eighteen members were nominated for directors for the 12 offices of the board. The election will be held at the next monthly meeting, September 12.

Richard Wheatley and Miss Thelma Smith were in charge of the entertainment committee. Mrs. F. J. Danratowski supervised the serving of refreshments. The Rev. Henry Fox led in the community singing.

WIFE ATTACKED AS MATE DOZES

While Mrs. Stella Skulinowski, of 142 Forty-third street, battled with an armed male intruder in the basement of her home and screamed for help, her husband, Robert, dozed unconcernedly in bed on the second floor, thinking the noise was outside, she testified in Morals Court today.

Mrs. Skulinowski testified the man entered the cellar through an open door last midnight. Her brother, Joseph Kromrowski, of 120 Long way, approaching the house, heard her cries and ran to her aid. When police arrived, they testified, they found the brother sitting on John Swick, of 5432 Harrison street, who had been used roughly.

Swick was in St. Francis Hospital today, recovering from lacerations, police informed Magistrate A. D. Brandon, who continued the hearing until Swick can be present.

Bunker Hill Emblems Displayed to Tourists On Visit to Cathedral

Eagle Scout Clark B. Johnston, of Crafton, who has received many honors as an ideal Scout, is reporting details of the International jamboree at Birkenhead, England, for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. His cabled news reports are being published exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

By CLARK B. JOHNSTON,
Eagle Scout
Correspondent, Sun-Telegraph

BIRKENHEAD, Eng., Aug. 9.—Baldwin Curtis and myself were the guests yesterday of A. E. Loose, of Heswell, on a visit to the walled city of Chester. Accompanying us was Miss Lillian Mills, who has a brother, Nelson Mills, living in Pittsburgh.

We visited the old cathedral which dates back to the twelfth century. It was here that we met Lady Paget, who showed us two Cheshire battle-flags carried by the British at the Battle of Bunker Hill. Wolfe was wraped in one of them after he was killed at Quebec.

In a small English car we journeyed over the beautiful countryside, stopping at various small towns on the river Dee.

We had a ride to a large manor house. Old houses with thatched roofs were set back of stone walls surrounded by beautiful flower gardens. The English countryside is one of the most interesting things we have seen.

The other boys went to Liverpool and visited the cathedral there.

Boy Scouts who are interested—and all of the thousands in Western Pennsylvania are interested—in this biggest event in the history of Scoutdom will find exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph news written for them by one of their own Scouts. Scout Johnston will feature the news which he as a Scout knows will be of special interest to Scouts here. Watch the Sun-Telegraph for his articles.

Friends Barred From Execution, Slayer Sad

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 9.—(INS.)—The main thing worrying James H. Alderman today was the denial of his request that he be allowed to invite his friends to his execution. He is under sentence to be hanged at Fort Lauderdale August 17 for the murder of two coast guardsmen and a secret service agent.

"I want to have my friends there," Alderman declared after the Federal District Court denied his plea. "There are a number of church workers I would like to ask and the newspapers should be represented for I want a true story to be published of the execution."

RED SPEECHES SCANNED

Whether leaders of the unmolested North Side meeting of the Communists' party and the Young Communists' League will be arrested for utterances made by speakers may be decided today by city officials.

Public Safety Director James M. Clark and Acting City Attorney Charles Lang will study a transcript of the speeches late this afternoon. The transcript copies were completed today and copies turned over to Director Clark and Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh.

The meeting was held Wednesday night in East Ohio street, with police under Capt. Anthony Block on duty to prevent outbreaks. Commenting on the police attitude towards Red meetings, Director Clark today said:

"It is not the intention of the police department or myself to suppress such meetings if proper application is filed and a permit issued. However, the police department has the right by city ordinance to designate the time and place where such meetings should be held.

"If officials of such organizations comply with the law, the police department nor myself have no intention to suppress them. By complying with the law, they will be granted permits the same as any other organizations. In applying for the permit, if the time and place is satisfactory to the police department and they adhere to the law in every other way, we have no objection to issuing permits and sanctioning such meetings."

Soldiers Are Disappointed In Kaiser After His Inspection Tour

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Paul Baumer and his soldier comrades all enlisted at 18. During their training, they were abused and persecuted by a former mail-carrier, now Corp. Himmelstross. Hating him, they beat him up the last night. Later, at the front, he appears. One of the privates calls him a "dirty hound." He threatens court-martial. Light sentences are imposed when the lieutenant learns the whole story of the corporal's abuse in camp. Paul and his comrades are back in the front lines. On the way they passed piles of new coffins. Their spirits are low. After days of fighting, the trenches are wrecked. Food is scarce and the barrage is so heavy that none can be brought up. Baumer and his comrades are in hand-to-hand fighting defending their position. After a successful counter-attack, night comes and all is quiet in the trenches. Again the shelling begins; attack, counter-attack, charge, repulse. Young recruits, with little knowledge of warfare, fall the easiest victims. Paul's company has been relieved and casualties are found to be numerous. While in swimming Paul and his comrades speak to several French girls across the canal. That night they visit the girls' home. Paul is granted a furlough but is sorry when he leaves his comrades. Everything at home seems changed and he is not at ease. He hates the silly questions asked about the fighting. Paul goes to see Mrs. Kemmerich and lies to her about the way her son was killed. He has reported back to the camp where he had his first training as a soldier. Paul returns to the front and is glad to be with his old comrades again.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THERE'S a great deal of polishing being done. We are inspected at every turn. Everything that is torn is exchanged for new. I score a spotless new tunic out of it and Kat, of course, an entire outfit. A rumor is going round that there may be peace, but the other story is more likely—that we are bound for Russia. Still, what do we need new things for in Russia? At last it leaks out—the Kaiser is coming to review us. Hence all the inspections.

For eight whole days one would suppose we were in a base camp, there is so much drill and fuss. Everyone is peevish and touchy, we do not take kindly to all this polishing, much less to parades. Such things exasperate a soldier more than the front line.

At last the moment arrives. We stand up stiff and the Kaiser appears. We are curious to see what he looks like. He stalks along the line, and I am really rather disappointed; judging from the pictures I imagined him to be bigger and more powerfully built, and above all to have a thundering voice.

He distributes Iron Crosses and speaks to this man and to that. Then we march off.

Afterwards we discuss it. Tjaden says with astonishment:

"So that is the All-Highest! And everyone, bar nobody, has to stand up stiff in front of him!" He meditates: "Hindenburg, too, he has to stand up stiff to him, eh?"

"Sure," says Kat.

Tjaden hasn't finished yet. He thinks for a while and then asks: "And would a king have to stand up stiff to an emperor?"

None of us is quite sure about it, but we don't suppose so. They are both so exalted that standing strictly to attention is probably not insisted on.

"What rot you do hatch out," says Kat. "The main point is that you have to stand stiff yourself."

But Tjaden is quite fascinated. His otherwise prosy fancy is blowing bubbles. "But look," he announces, "I simply can't believe that an emperor has to go to the latrine the same as I have."

"You can bet your boots on it."

"Four and a half-wit make seven," says Kat. "You've got a maggot in your brain, Tjaden, just you run along to the latrine quick, and get your head clear, so that you don't talk like a two-year-old."

Tjaden disappears.

"But what I would like to know," says Albert, "is whether there would not have been a war if the Kaiser had said No."

"I'm sure of this much," I interject, "he was against it from the first."

"Well, if not him alone, then perhaps if 20 or 30 people in the world had said No."

"That's probable," I agree, "but they damned well said Yes."

"It's queer, when one thinks about it," goes on Kropp, "we are here to protect our fatherland. And the French are over there to protect their fatherland. Now, who's in the right?"

"Perhaps both," say I, without believing it.

"Yes, well now," pursues Albert, and I see that he means to drive me into a corner, "but our professors and parsons and newspapers say that we are the only ones that are right, and let's hope so—but the French professors and parsons and newspapers say that the right is on their side, what about that?"

"That I don't know," I say, "but whichever way it is there's war all the same and every month more countries coming in."

Tjaden reappears. He is still quite excited and again joins the conversation, wondering just how a war gets started.

"Mostly by one country badly offending another," answers Albert with a slight air of superiority.

Then Tjaden pretends to be obtuse. "A country? I don't follow. A mountain in Germany cannot offend a mountain in France. Or a river, or a wood, or a field of wheat."

"Are you really as stupid as that, or are you just pulling my leg?" growls Kropp. "I don't mean that at all. One people offends another—"

"Then I haven't any business here at all," replies Tjaden. "I don't feel myself offended."

"Well, let me tell you," says Albert sourly, "it doesn't apply to tramps like you."

"Then I can be going home right away," retorts Tjaden, and we all laugh.

"Ach, man! he means the people as a whole, the state —" exclaims Muller.

"State, state" — Tjaden snaps his fingers contemptuously. "Gendarmes, police, taxes, that's your state—if that's what you are talking about, no thank you."

"That's right," says Kat, "You've said something for once, Tjaden. State and home country, there's a big difference."

"But they go together," insists Kropp, "without the state there wouldn't be any home country."

"True, but just you consider, almost all of us are simple folk. And in France, too, the majority of men are laborers, workmen, or poor clerks. Now just why would a French blacksmith or a French shoemaker want to attack us? No, it is merely the rulers. I had never seen a Frenchman before I came here, and it will be just the same with the majority of Frenchmen as regards us. They weren't asked about it any more than we were."

"Then what exactly is the war for?" asks Tjaden.

Kat shrugs his shoulders. "There must be some people to whom the war is useful."

"Well, I'm not one of them," grins Tjaden.

"Not you, nor anybody else here."

"Who are they then?" persists Tjaden. "It isn't any use to the Kaiser either. He has everything he can want already."

"I'm not so sure about that," contradicts Kat, "he has not had a war up till now. And every fullgrown emperor requires at least one war, otherwise he wouldn't become famous. You look in your school books."

"And generals, too," adds Detering, "they become famous through war."

"Even more famous than emperors," adds Kat.

"There are other people back behind there who profit by the war, that's certain," growls Detering.

"I think it is more a kind of fever," says Albert. "No one in particular wants it, and then all at once there it is. We didn't want the war, the others say the same thing—and yet half the world is in it all the same."

"But there are more lies told by the other side than by us," say I; "just think of those pamphlets the prisoners have on them, where it says that we eat Belgian children. The fellows who write that ought to go and hang themselves. They are the real culprits."

Muller gets up. "Anyway, it is better that the war is here instead of in Germany. Just you take a look at the shell holes."

"True," assents Tjaden, "but no war at all would be better still."

He is quite proud of himself because he has for once scored over us volunteers. And his opinion is quite typical here, one meets it time and again, and there is nothing with which one can properly counter it, because that is the limit of their comprehension of the factors involved. The national feeling of the soldier resolves itself into this—here he is. But that is the end of it; everything else from joining up onwards he criticizes from a practical point of view.

Albert lies down on the grass and growls angrily: "The best thing is not to talk about the rotten business."

"It won't make any difference, that's sure," agrees Kat.

As for the windfall, we have to return almost all the new things and take back our old rags again. The good ones were merely for the inspection.

Instead of going to Russia, we go up the line again. On the way we pass through a devastated wood with the tree trunks shattered and the ground ploughed up.

At several places there are tremendous craters. "Great guns, something's hit that," I say to Kat.

"Trench mortars," he replies, and then points up at one of the trees.

In the branches dead men are hanging. A naked soldier is squatting in the fork of a tree, he still has his helmet on, otherwise he is entirely unclad. There is only half of him sitting up there, the top half, the legs are missing.

"What can that mean?" I ask.

"He's been blown out of his clothes," mutters Tjaden.

"It's funny," says Kat, "we have seen that a couple of times now. If a mortar gets you it blows you almost out of your clothes. It's the concussion that does it."

I search around. And so it is. Here hang bits of uniform, and somewhere else is plastered a bloody mess that was once a human limb. Over there lies a body with nothing but a piece of the underpants on one leg, and the collar of the tunic around its neck. Otherwise it is naked and the clothes are hanging up in the tree. Both arms are missing, as though they had been pulled out. I discover one of them 20 yards off in a shrub.

The dead man lies on his face. There, where the arm wounds are, the earth is black with blood. Underfoot the leaves are scratched up as though the man had been kicking.

"That's no joke, Kat," say I.

"No more is a shell splinter in the belly," he replies, shrugging his shoulders.

"But don't get tender-hearted," says Tjaden.

All this can only have happened a little while ago, the blood is still fresh. As everybody we see there is dead we do not waste any more time, but report the affair at the next stretcher-bearers' post. After all it is not our business to take these stretcher-bearers' jobs away from them.

Lou Announces Marriage Date After Her Dad Suffers Stroke

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Becoming cynical at her mother's wish to have her marry for wealth and social position, Nancy Hollenbeck, young and beautiful, accepts the ardent attentions of Jack Beamer, supposedly an Englishman of noble birth, who is married to a wealthy invalid. On a mountain trip Nancy, after a brief courtship, makes a hasty marriage with a handsome ranger, Roger Decatur. Sickening of the loneliness, with Roger away, she returns home to resume her old life, still keeping her marriage a secret. When Roger, deeply in love with Nancy, comes to take her back, she tells him unless he makes his home in the city she will divorce him, although she realizes her own love for him. After Roger leaves, Nancy continues her clandestine affair with Beamer, whose wife, aware of his philandering, refuses to free him. Louise, Nancy's sister, always second with men, now has a rich, though elderly, suitor. Beamer takes Nancy out to his stock farm on a jaunt. Mrs. Beamer unexpectedly arrives and Nancy is bundled into the kitchen. Beamer decides to placate his wife to protect his own financial welfare. Nancy, though humiliated, forgives all when he phones. At home Nancy assails her mother for catering to Lachman, Louise's rich admirer. When Louise, who is in love with Mat Tully, forgets her family dinner for Lachman, disaster impends.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLII.

OLIVER T. LACHMAN, president of the Parkhurst National Bank, was gone, and all Peter Hollenbeck's hopes had gone with him. He would never be vice president now. He would never be anything but a clerk. A failure. Lachman would never do anything for him now. Maybe he'd find an excuse to . . . but no, no man would dismiss a faithful employe just because his daughter . . . his daughter . . .

Papa's round, gray head went down in his hands. He had not realized how much he had counted on Louise. But I wouldn't have her marry him if she didn't love him, he thought, defending himself and trying to put that last unpleasant picture of a moist and repellent Mr. Lachman sputtering on the doorstep resolutely out of his mind.

"It wasn't as if I were counting on it, exactly," he whispered to himself, "I just thought, well, it would be a great thing for us all if she happened to take to him. And many a young girl would be only too glad to have the opportunity. He'd have made her a wonderful husband. . . well, it wasn't to be." He sighed again. His unquiet thoughts ran on . . . suppose Lachman did get rid of him . . . what would he do? How could he, at his age, go the rounds of the employment bureaus asking for work, asking his friends, borrowing money? . . . He caught Kitty staring at him, fascinated. He must have shown his thoughts too clearly. "Well, what is to be, will be!" he said with forced cheerfulness, trying to sound as if he were reassuring her instead of himself.

She drew away from his clumsy, reaching arm. Her thin little face was drawn with hate.

"Yes, that's just like you, blaming it on fate, when it's your own fault! It isn't for myself," she managed to articulate between sobs. "I don't care for myself. It's the girls I'm thinking of. My life is ruined. But I won't stand back and see my girls —"

He didn't understand. He just looked at her blankly.

"It's your mother's fault!" she shrieked, pointing a shaking finger at him. "Oh, don't look at me like that! I know! it isn't enough for her to make us ridiculous with the neighbors. . . she has, she has! Don't you interrupt me! . . . But you see what she's done to Nancy, and now Lou . . . Lou!"

"I guess Louise is thinking for herself, Kitty." In spite of himself he sighed again, heavily.

"That's all you know. It's that woman. She put her up to it—it's her doing. . . no girl of mine—"

"Now, Kitty, you'll have one of your headaches."

"Don't Kitty me! Your mother will have to go, that's all. I won't have her in my house another day. This settles it!"

"Kitty—please—Kitty!"

"I'm sure I've tried to do my best. I did advise my girls. Now they've turned against me. You heard Nancy insult Mr. Lachman! You saw how much Louise cared for my feelings! And now you . . . you . . . after all I gave up for you . . . ooh, to think, that after all these years, . . ."

"Kitty, please—"

"All right, I'll go then. I'll go to Ellie; she'll take me in. To be turned out of my own house . . . oh, I can't bear it. How can I ever . . ."

"But, Kitty, darling—"

The tears in mamma's eyes dried. She said in quite her ordinary voice, "Make up your mind, I'm waiting! Are you going to get rid of her, or aren't you?"

She thought she had won, for Peter Hollenbeck, seeming to grow smaller and smaller, slumped in his chair until his head fell forward on his chest.

"I'm waiting for my answer!"

It was not like Peter to torture her this way! She made a little impatient movement toward him, and saw his face, livid and distorted.

"Peter! You're sick!"

But only his broken, stentorian breathing answered her. Peter Hollenbeck had had a stroke.

"I'll see you in the morning, Hollenbeck," Mr. Lachman had said. And now it was morning, and Hollenbeck was late.

Mr. Lachman consulted his large gold watch. Compared it with the bank clock. Good! This would make it easier. He had made up his mind to get rid of the old fool. He should have been fired long ago. It wasn't fair to the stockholders to keep him on the payroll. And after the unpleasantness of last evening. . . . He began to compose the little speech he would make, friendly, but firm. . . . You must realize as well as I, Hollenbeck, that the welfare of the bank must come first. Much as it grieves me to have to sever our relations, our, er . . . happy relations of so many years, nevertheless you must agree with me that a younger man . . .

The speech he was rehearsing was never finished. Mr. Stafford, the cashier, brought him the news. Mr. Hollenbeck was sick. A stroke, the doctor said.

Hum . . . Oliver Lachman was stumped. You can't fire a man while he's sick. "Hum," Mr. Lachman cleared his throat again. "That's sad news!"

The bank employes clubbed together and sent a basket of spring flowers. Mr. Lachman, annoyed, sent a larger basket. What else could he do?

Grandma Hollenbeck climbed stairs, made soup, nursed the invalid. The girls, crushed and silent at first, began to think once more of their own affairs. Nancy resumed her mysterious trips down town, prinking for hours before she left, returning tired, defiant, more impatient than ever with mama's questioning, her warnings and advice.

"I don't care what the circumstances are, Nancy. A young man should ALWAYS call for a young lady at her home. I don't know what's the matter with young men these days. When I was a girl—"

"Mama, STOP! I don't care what you did when you were a girl. I'm going to get all the fun I can out of my life. I don't get much—"

Mama always cried when Nancy spoke so bitterly. I did my best, she thought disconsolately, it isn't my fault that Peter never got ahead. No girls were ever better brought up than mine . . . ooh, dear, why won't they listen to me?

They wouldn't listen. Nobody would listen. Not even papa. He would close his eyes and pretend to be asleep . . . maybe he was, she couldn't be sure. But when his mother or the girls wanted to see him he was always awake!

March gave way to April, April with its gift of summery sunshine, roses, fledgling sparrows in the magnolia tree under the bedroom window. And, as if he were feeling the intoxication of spring, the surge of new life all around him, papa took on a healthier color, he learned to move his knotted hands. Even his thick tongue became controllable. He looked younger, and happier than he had in years. "Pretty nice for an old fellow," he grinned, "sitting out in the yard in a wheel chair, with nothing to do but read, and the old check coming in just the same!" He pinched Louise's cheek, and smiled again. He had ceased to worry about her not marrying. After all, it was nice to have the girls home.

And then the blow came.

They were sitting around the fireplace after dinner. He was in the wheel chair he had learned to move so easily. Kitty dozed over her embroidery. His mother was mending stockings. Nancy—just a shadow of the gold and rose Nancy of last spring, sat listlessly, lovely hands in her lap, doing nothing. Louise's chair was close to his, he was explaining the heavyweight championship fight he saw at Shelby. . . Jack Dempsey—

"Just a minute, papa, I think that's for me. I'm expecting a phone call!" Louise interrupted, and went out into the hall.

He waited, impatient, for her to return.

At last she came back, and he went on. "Well,, sir, nobody knew for sure whether the fight was going to come off or not, but I figured I'd be there just in case. And so I was one of the comparatively few who saw one of the greatest championship bouts in history. Well, sir, when Jack sat down at the end of the second round. . . ." He talked on and on, watching Lou's flushed, excited face, adding a few blood-thirsty details to make the story better. Then he waited for her comment.

For a long moment she did not answer. Then, addressing no one in particular, her eyes on the tips of her shiny brown pumps, she said:

"I'm going to be married Thursday."

M'LAGLEN'S BROTHER DOING SCULP. OF VICTOR AS CAPTAIN FLAGG

By DOROTHY HERZOG.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 9.

VICTOR M'LAGLEN has 10 or so brothers. He has one in town at this paragraphing. Arthur, who sculps, Arthur used to take turns with Vic throwing hatchets at each other in a voodvil turn. Turn being correct. Now he's off the hatchets for the sculps. And is reported to be doing a full length study of Vic as Capt. Flagg in "What Price Glory."

Lita Grey Chaplin, Charlie's former wife, is touring these days in a voodvil skit. Her next stop is San Francisco. L. G. decided her family orta get a glimpse of her grease - painty traipsings. So she will bundle four generations of family to S. F., including sons Sydney Earl, aged 3, and Charles Jr., aged 4; one mother, Lillian Grey, aged 41, and one grandmother — who is great ditto to the kiddies — aged 60. Lita is 21. Put 'em all together and they spell—posterity.

Hears of Heat, Stops at Beach

Catherine Dale Owen craved a trip to New York ere she settled down to more flick activity. After much conferring and more hawing, the M-G-M-ites consented grandiosely to allow Catherine a two-week holiday. She packed her luggage and made reservations on the good ole iron horse Chief. About this time, however, she learned of sundry cloudbursts that devastated train schedules. She also heard the heat in Manhattan rivaled the heat out here. So Catherine instructed the driver to take her to the beach instead of the Santa Fe station. And there, bless you, she is seeing the sights. Catherine, by the by, debuts opposite Jack Gilbert in "Olympia," a yarn dealing with princes and princesses and sech.

Octopus Hero Of Short Tale

The idea was suggested by H. H. It is entitled: Daily Short Story. Our hero is Pete Scripter. Pete writes scenarios, but he can't get a job. So he goes forth and buys a little octopus which he baptizes Clarence. He trains Clarence to do his bidding and when Clarence reaches fearsome maturity he takes him to Malibu. Comes Sunday. B. P. Schulberg, custodian of Paramount production, exits to the beach and bravely to the ocean. In he plunges. Pete snooks to the ocean, Clarence concealed under his robe. Glances to left and right, he throws the octoapus into the water. Clarence makes a fish-line for B. P. who, of course, screams. Pete dashes to his rescue. A mighty battle with the octopus ensues, Pete muttering under his breath: "Take it easy, you rat," which Clarence does. With the octopus playing dead—as he has been taught—B. P. staggers to

Movie Music Goes High Hat

That the motion picture is achieving a position of musical importance is indicated in the selection Eugene Goossens, distinguished conductor, will offer this evening in the Hollywood Bowl concert. Mr. Goossens includes among the numbers to be rendered by an orchestra of 100 the ballet from "Paris Bound," an outloud featuring Ann Harding. Arthur Alexander composed the piece especially for the picture. It interprets the lives of two of the principal characters in a series of dance rhythms and dramatic phrases describing the turmoil of a love denied expression. That Mr. Goossens considered the ballet worthy of concert conspicuity is indeed significant.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.

THE ancient years have seen us hand in hand,
Lover my own,
The ancient suns have shone upon bright sand
We trod alone,
The ancient winds have swept an ancient land
That we have known.

Forgotten moons have sailed forgotten skies
And shed their light,
Forgotten stars reflected in your eyes
Love's glory bright,
Forgotten waters murmured lullabies
For us at night.

Dim dreams have followed us o'er land and sea
And follow still,
And countless eons, lost to memory
Fate to fulfill,
Have sent you down the trails of time to me
And always will.

NEWSPAPERMAN STUFF

FAR be it from this member of the craft to boast about some of his confreres, but the newspaper racket certainly has its heroes. So that their respective readers might have good photos of the Graf's arrival, two morning tabloids assigned its hocus-focus experts to shoot the Zep from the paper's own planes. The Zeppelin's last moment decision, however, to fly over Manhattan after the sun went down probably will cost the life of one of the lads.

One plane stayed up all night fighting head winds searching for a place to land, and the other plane, suffering from the same difficulty, finally cracked up, crushing the photographer almost lifeless. But it is all considered "part of the game" and you won't see any bulletins about these brave boys, even in their own rags.

THE MORNING MAIL

"Dear Winchell," writes Fred Allen again, "if you had been Dr. Eckener passing over Times Square, after 93 hours of continuous flying, how would you have liked to hear this conversation below:

"Urchin: 'Look mamma, the Zeppelin!'

"Mamma (looking up); 'Nu, that reminds me. I forgot to buy liverwurst for papa.'"

ANOTHER

TWO actors were discussing the recent German accomplishments. "I tell you, you gotta hand it to them Germans. The Bremen breaks the record crossing. The Graf Zep completes its second trip and they've built a new 12-motored commercial plane. I tell you they're leading everything!"

"I guess you're right," said the other sarcastically, "over here they're even first on the vaudeville bills."

NIFTY

And Lester Allen says that the honeymoon is over when he begins to think that she dances like a heifer instead of a zephyr.

NOT NEW, BUT CLEAN

Charles Ray, the two-a-dayer, offers you the one about the lad who came home with a black and blue orb. "Good gawd!" ejaculated his headache, "how did you git that one?"

"Mike Murphy gimme it," he replied sadly.

"You mean to tell me," the Mrs. exclaimed, "you let that little shrimp give you a black eye?"

"Shhh," he shhh'd, "don't spake so disrespectfully of the dead."

ADD SIMILES

BUGS BAER'S: "Comfortable as a farmer with his Sunday shoes under his arm." . . . Robert Roe's: "Monotonous as a million $1 bills." . . . O. Lowell's: "Nervous as a commuter during the third act of 'Parsifal.'" . . . Lawrence Gilman's: "As passionate as shredded wheat." . . . THE TRAGEDY OF LOVE

Among other Broadway romances that may never culminate happily is the affair of the Ziegfeld Girl From Poor, But Honest Parents, and the Comedian who Has Lots of Money. It appears that he is desperately in love with her and she with him, but he is a Jew and she is a Shiksa. What to do? She is the only lass of the stage who is honestly religious, too, and there isn't a person in town Who Can Say This Much About Her!

Certainly, she could make her mother and father happier by marrying a man she loves, and whose wealth could make them comfortable. But her religion forbids it. And then there is always that fear of what people would say, don't you know.

ADMONITIONS

I TELL myself it will not do
For all my thots to be of you.
And that it isn't very wise
To waste so many sighs.

Each day I tell my fluttering heart
It would be best if we could part,
And think that we had never met—
And yet— —Andree.

OF COURSE!

Eddie Cantor's return to town and Ziegfeld's "Whoopee" signals a gag. Cantor brings back the one about the suburban movie theater owner who complained about business. "Well," suggested Eddie, "why don't you try putting on some high class pictures once in a while?"

"Why should I?" asked the owner.

"So you can attract high class people," replied Cantor.

"They're the ones I have to give passes to!" was the retort.

RIPLEY IT OR NOT!

THEY were saying that Sir Beerbohm Tree, the renowned British actor-manager, never could bring himself to be harsh with a performer, even if he were required to fire him. Once he engaged a fellow whose role called for only one line, which the poor wretch couldn't handle. The patient Tree finally called him aside and said: "Have you a brother?"

"Oh, yes, sir," beamed the ham.

"Er—er—was he drowned at sea?" queried Tree.

"No, sir, he is still living, thank gawd!"

"Well, I'm sorry," responded the perspiring manager, "I forgot to tell you when you were engaged that this part calls for a person who has a brother who was drowned at sea."

PIRATES END HOME STAND

SPORT COMMENT
by JAMES J. LONG

Slump May Be Ending. | Great Fielding Record.
Beat Cards 11 Straight. | Alex Pitching Model.
Bartell's Second Homer. | Yankees' Gain Trivial.

GRANTHAM FIRST-BASE POSSIBILITY

WHETHER or not it means the end of the long and disastrous slump of the Pirates remains to be seen, but the victory that Ervin Brame's fine pitching brought to the home clubs yesterday carried a whole lot of encouragement by reason of the fact that it marked the first time in almost three weeks that the Bushmen had succeeded in winning two consecutive games.

Ervin Brame

The last previous capture of two straight contests by the Buccaneers dates back to July 21 and 22, when the Rovers defeated the Giants, 5 to 3, in New York, and the Robins, 13 to 3, at Forbes Field.

From that time up to yesterday, the Bucs were unable to win two decisions in succession. They first dropped two straight to the Robins; then they won one, lost one; won one and lost one against the Braves; lost two, won one and lost one against the Phillies, and lost two and won one against the Giants.

So two wins in a row give the fans something on which to hang a little hope, anyhow. The double success may be an indication that the Corsairs at last are headed in the right direction again.

YESTERDAY'S victory gave the Bucs a record of 11 consecutive triumphs over the Cardinals, the best mark made by any National League club against any opponent this year. It also gave them the honors in the season's series, as they have won 12 games from the Redbirds against only two defeats, with but eight contests remaining to be played. Mitchell and Johnson have been the only pitchers to down the Bucs.

The only other series in the National League that has been decided as far as the season's honors are concerned is that between Chicago and Brooklyn, in which the Cubs have won 12 games and lost only two. Seven series have been decided in the American League, the Athletics having won three, the Yanks three and the Browns one.

WHEN Dick Bartell crashed one of Grover Alexander's offerings to deep center for a home run in the fifth inning yesterday, the second four baser ever made by the young infielder in the big show went into the books.

It was Bartell's first homer of the present season, and he played in 91 games before he made it. Last year he made one round-tripper in 72 engagements. In 1927 he took part in only one major league game.

Dick Bartell

BARTELL'S batting, though it is showing a pleasing improvement after one of the slumps that have been common to the Pirates during the last three weeks, is not the only feature of the crack young infielder's work at present. Have you noticed his fielding record from day to day? Well, Dick has been stepping around on the defense at a clip not surpassed by any other infielder in the major circuits. The excellence of his work is attented by the fact that up to today he had played 17 games in succession without the ghost of an error.

BARTELL has not made a misplay since he fumbled Fred Leach's grounder in the ninth inning of the first game of a double-header in New York on July 20. Since that foozle, Dick has accepted a total of 110 chances without a slip, making 48 putouts and 62 assists up to today.

Of his 17 consecutive perfect fielding games, Bartell has played 12 at shortstop and five at second base. It is evidence of his fighting heart as well as his baseball ability that he has been able to play so steadily in the field in spite of the discouraging condition of the club and his own slump.

GROVER ALEXANDER'S arrival at a total of 373 victories, which will pass Christy Mathewson's mark of 372 and set a new record for games won in the National League by a pitcher in a lifetime, has been delayed until his next time out or later, as a result of his defeat yesterday.

George Grantham

But it wasn't the fault of the 42-year-old marvel, who pitched ball that would have won nine times out of 10. He and Brame might have battled out there for hours if Alex's support hadn't cracked in the fourth round. The veteran set a splendid example for other pitchers in the way he hustled that game through to a conclusion, with Brame's co-operation. It lasted only one hour and 19 minutes, the fastest game of the year here. It takes some hurlers that long to get through four or five innings.

GEORGE GRANTHAM made a trip to Linesville, Pa., yesterday to have his injured arm treated by a specialist, and the Arizona slugger is confident that after a little more rest for his arm and his wrenched foot he will be able to play by next Sunday or Monday. If George's throwing arm does not come around quickly, don't be surprised if he is stationed at first base when he returns to the lineup, with Bartell remaining at second, Clarke at short and Paul Waner returning to right field. If Brickell goes well, however, he probably will be allowed to stay in right field, with Paul Waner at first base, Grantham at second and Clarke at shortstop.

WILLIAM WRIGLEY, JR., owner of the Cubs, though his club had a lead of six and a half games in the National League race up to today, says he has seen too many blow-ups in the past to do any premature pennant bragging. However, in the next breath, he starts to talk about world series seating arrangements.

"I'd be willing to rent Soldiers' Field if we get into the series," he says, "but that was built for football games and parades, and can be used for boxing, but it could not be converted into a baseball park. The seating capacity of Wrigley Field will not be enlarged, and stands will not be allowed on the playing field, so if any world series contests are played in Chicago the crowds will be smaller than many of those which attended our recent games with people on the field."

THE announcement in connection with yesterday's American League result in Philadelphia that the Yankees cut the Athletics' lead to 10½ games sounds like the remark Carson Bigbee once made after knocking a home run—that he had gained one on Babe Ruth.

A margin of 10½ games is practically as good as a million miles at this stage. If the A's capture only 23 of their remaining 47 games, or in other words lose more than they win from now to the finish, the A's would be required to win 37 of their remaining 52 games, or .712 ball for more than eight weeks, to beat them out.

Tommy Loughran

THE outcome of the heavyweight bout between Tommy Loughran and Jack Sharkey, planned for September 26 at the Yankee Stadium in New York, probably will depend almost wholly upon the form that the unreliable Sharkey happens to be in when that date rolls around. If the gabby gob has one of those off spells when he performs like a third rater—and those spells are in the majority—Loughran, with his skill and generalship, will be almost certain to outbox him and win the decision. But if Sharkey has one of his good nights, his harder punching and advantage in weight probably will win for him.

CHAMP PLAYS BEST GOLF OF TOURNEY

BULLETIN.

FOREST PARK, St. Louis, Aug. 9.—Carl F. Kauffmann, of Pittsburgh, was 3 up on Johnny Boyd, of Philadelphia, at the end of the first nine holes of their National Public Links championship third round match. John Hornsby, of Topeka, was 2 up on Gordon Denny, of Louisville, and Wesley Casper, of Louisville, was 4 up on Mortimer Jaffee, of New York.

FOREST PARK, ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Carl Kauffmann, of Pittsburgh, today found his path to a third straight national public links golf championship blocked by Johnny Boyd, a haughty blond from Philadelphia, who has been yearning for a chance to beat him for three years.

The two representatives from rival Pennsylvania cities were paired against each other in the quarter final round of the national championship tournament here.

Boyd all along has contended Kauffmann has won the municipal crown largely because of the "breaks" in championship pairings and that if he ever got the chance he would prove it.

"I am not a whale of a golfer myself," he said, "but if I ever get a crack at Kauffmann, I'll prove they grow better golfers on Philadelphia's municipal links."

BOYD LONG SHOT

But among the galleries who have been watching Kauffmann turn in low cards day after day, Boyd was regared as merely a "long shot." The champion has won the largest following in the tournament by his showing—a showing that gave him a tie for medalist honors with a 151 total for 36 holes of match play when he romped to easy victories over R. H. Albeck, of Chicago, 5 and 3, and John Conway, of Detroit, 6 and 5.

Boyd had to fight all the way to win his first two matches, defeating Al Friebe, of St. Paul, 1 up on the nineteenth green, and Cooney Schaber, Louisville, 2 and 1.

Three other interesting matches were on the quarter final card. John Hornsby, a railroad clerk from Topeka, Kan., who eliminated Patsy Tiso, one of the three medalists, 1 up, in 20 holes, and Ernest Caldwell, Baltimore municipal champion, 1 up, was paired to battle Gordon Denny, of Louisville, Kentucky amateur champion, who pushed Harold Cook, of Toledo, and Dr. Irl Davies, of St. Louis, out of the running by margins of 2 and 1, and 1 up in 19 holes, respectively.

JAFFEE-CASPER PLAY

In the lower bracket, Mortimer Jaffee, 16-year-old New York City municipal champion, was matched against Wesley Casper, Louisville, former Kentucky amateur titleholder, and Milton Soncrant, of Toledo, who tied for the qualifying medal, faced Frank Connolly, Detroit municipal champion. Jaffee reached the quarter finals by eliminating Sterling Dawson, Chicago, 3 and 2, and Togo Hamamoto, St. Louis, Japanese, 4 and 3; Casper eliminated Ada Fordham, St. Paul, 6 and 5, and Connell Kersey, Louisville, 3 and 2; Soncrant defeated A. J. Parde, New Haven, Conn., 7 and 6 and Joe Merola, New York, 1 up, while Connolly distanced Guy McCall, Buffalo, 1 up and Frank Brokl, of St. Paul, Minnesota amateur champion, 1 up.

More rain fell last night, slowing up the course again.

KAUFFMANN STRONG

Kauffmann, who grows a stronger favorite with the gallery each time he wields his clubs, played the best two rounds of golf in the history of the hazardous championship course in his victorious march. In his first round, he shot but one over par in the 15 holes he was forced to travel to eliminate R. H. Albeck, of Chicago, 5 and 3, while in the afternoon he handed John Conway, of Detroit, who had previously elim-

TOMORROW—THE MYSTERY OF THE SQUARE INCH

MAX'S CONDUCT JUSTIFIES 'FREEZEOUT'

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Max Schmeling, the German heavyweight contender, will get little sympathy from the average follower of sports or lover of fair play in his present predicament of being on the outside looking in on the match that is to be staged next month for the Tunney-Muldoon trophy, and, consequently, the heavyweight championship of the world.

Max Schmeling.

Tommy Loughran, the light-heavyweight champion, who will formally renounce that title, has accepted terms to take Herr Max's place against Jack Sharkey in the big bout, and Schmeling will have to start in all over again and prime for his title chance a whole year from now.

As pointed out in these columns some time ago, Max was riding for such a fall. His cold-blooded treatment of Arthur Bulow, the manager who brought him to this country, and his high-handed tieup with Joe Jacobs and Billy McCarney in New York and subsequent refusal to go through with any matches arranged for him by Bulow foreshadowed such a finish for the German Dempsey. The New York Athletic Commission and others were overly patient with Schmeling and his handlers, whose attitude was not only ridiculous but impossible.

The crumbling of Schmeling's castle in the clouds should prove a lesson to other boxers who are only too prone to discard the men who pave the way for their success to go with hangers-on in the "racket" whose honeyed words promise titles and fortunes, but generally prove entirely empty.

LOUGHRAN GETS CHANCE

With Loughran in there against Sharkey, the big match becomes an all-America affair, instead of an international contest, but its drawing powers should not be in the least impaired. Loughran, wizard boxer that he is, figures to give Sharkey

Beans Reardon Enters Local Hospital

John L. (Beans) Reardon, popular National League umpire, entered the St. Francis Hospital yesterday and may be forced to undergo an operation for appendicitis.

Reardon stopped off here en route to New York, where he was to have begun a stand at the Polo Grounds today. He came here from Cincinnati, where he first noticed symptoms of appendicitis. He was examined by Dr. Alexander Colwell, who ordered him to St. Francis for observation.

Reardon did not know today whether or not he would undergo the operation at the present time or wait until he returns to his home on the Pacific Coast after the close of baseball season.

MISS M'KIM SETS RECORD

HONOLULU, Aug. 9.—(INS.)—Miss Josephine McKim, formerly of Homestead, Pa., today set a new world record for the 440-yard free style event in the National A. A. Albina Osipowich, of Massachusetts, was second and Adelaide Lambert, New York, third.

Eleanor Holm, New York, won the 220-yard backstroke event in 3 minutes 32-5 seconds. Joan McSheey, Whitensville, Mass., was second and Marion Gilman, San Francisco, third.

Waggoner Beats McLeod in Final

MONONGAHELA, Pa., Aug. 9.—Tom Waggoner, of Brownsville, 24-year-old member at the Nemacolin Country Club, captured the Washington-Greene County golf championship over the links of the Monongahela Valley Country Club yesterday when he defeated Ed McLeod, of Washington, the defending champion, 5 and 3.

In the second flight, W. C. Binns defeated Arthur Wyatt, 1 up, 19 holes. George Sauers and Reese are playing in the final of the third sixteen today. Guy Woodward defeated Larry Stewart, 3 and 1, in the final of the fourth division and Frank Nelson upset William Furnier, 2 and 1, in the final of the fifth sixteen.

More than 200 racing canines are at the track.

ALEX THWARTED IN TRY FOR RECORD

Aleck the Great doesn't need to sigh for more pitching worlds to conquer, yet it wasn't through any of the veteran's shortcomings that he lost yesterday's contest. Alexander was trying for a game that would have recorded Victory No. 373 since he came to the big show. The pitching marvel is now tied with the late Christy Mathewson for the National League mark, Walter Johnson owning 416 in the American League.

The Pirates will meet the Cardinals this afternoon and later in the evening will say farewell to Pittsburgh for more than two weeks, during which time the Bushwhackers will invade the East. Seventeen battles with the Eastern teams, including two dual fights, are on the card. The siege will begin tomorrow with a doubleheader in Brooklyn.

The second game with Bill McKechnie's stars may bring together a duel of southpaws. Manager Bush, of the home fighters, expects to call upon Larry French for the finale. Skipper Bill McKechnie has Bill Sherdel and Clarence Mitchell in readiness.

BUCCOS IMPROVED

The Buccos looked like a real ball club yesterday as they defeated the Redbirds, with Aleck the Great up. Ervin Brame held the St. Louis sluggers to three hits and the Kentuckian received remarkable support. Alexander was in fine form, but was the victim of some loose play in the Cardinals' infield. The score was 5 to 1, and the snappy contest was the shortest of the season at Forbes Field, the battle being over in 1 hour and 19 minutes.

Paul Waner resumed play yesterday after a brief rest. The star batsman went to first base, Fred Brickell taking Paul's old post in right field. The Oklahoman was given a big ovation by the fans and he injected a double into the fracas that had a big bearing on the Pirates' big inning.

In the event of a left-hander working for the enemy this afternoon, Sheely may return to first base. The combination of yesterday was attractive and the speed of the game tended to make the 5,000 fans in attendance feel they were looking at a real spectacle.

Hundreds in the audience were out largely to welcome Bill McKechnie back to Pittsburgh. Bill was given a fine welcome by his friends, and McKechnie surely did lead an appealing team on the field, even if the Redbirds were trimmed. Chick Hafey has been on the ailing list, but the slugger

WIGHTMAN CUP NET MATCHES OPEN TODAY

U. S. FAVORED TO WIN BACK TROPHY

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Mrs. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman, first of America's great women tennis stars, and Helen Wills, the most recent, will lead America's bid to regain the Wightman Cup from England in the seventh of the two-day international series starting today on the courts at Forest Hills.

Donor of the trophy and queen of American tennis when the present-day stars were little children, Mrs. Wightman will pair with Miss Helen Jacobs in the final match of the series, the doubles engagement with Mrs. B. C. Covell and Mrs. D. C. Shepherd-Barron, of England, tomorrow. Mrs. Wightman won the first of four national singles titles 20 years ago and the last 10 years later.

COAST GIRLS ACES

As captain of the American team, Mrs. Wightman will lead into action a trio of California youngsters who hold the first three ranking places in American women's tennis, Helen Wills, world ruler of the women's courts; Miss Helen Jacobs, crown princess of American tennis, and Miss Edith Cross, third ranking girl star.

Miss Wills will open the engagement against Mrs. Phoebe Watson at 3:30 p. m., and an hour later Miss Jacobs will engage Miss Betty Nuthall. Miss Wills and Miss Cross will team at 5:30 against Mrs. Watson and Mrs. L. R. C. Mitchell in the first of the doubles matches.

The feature match of the series is expected tomorrow when Miss Wills and Miss Nuthall clash in the singles.

TEAMS IN TIE

Since the start of the Wightman Cup series, both England and the United States have won three victories apiece. The American won in 1923, 1926 and 1927 and the English women in 1924, 1925 and 1928, the last series by the narrow margin of four matches to three. The American team is a favorite to regain the cup.

The complete Wightman Cup series schedule follows:

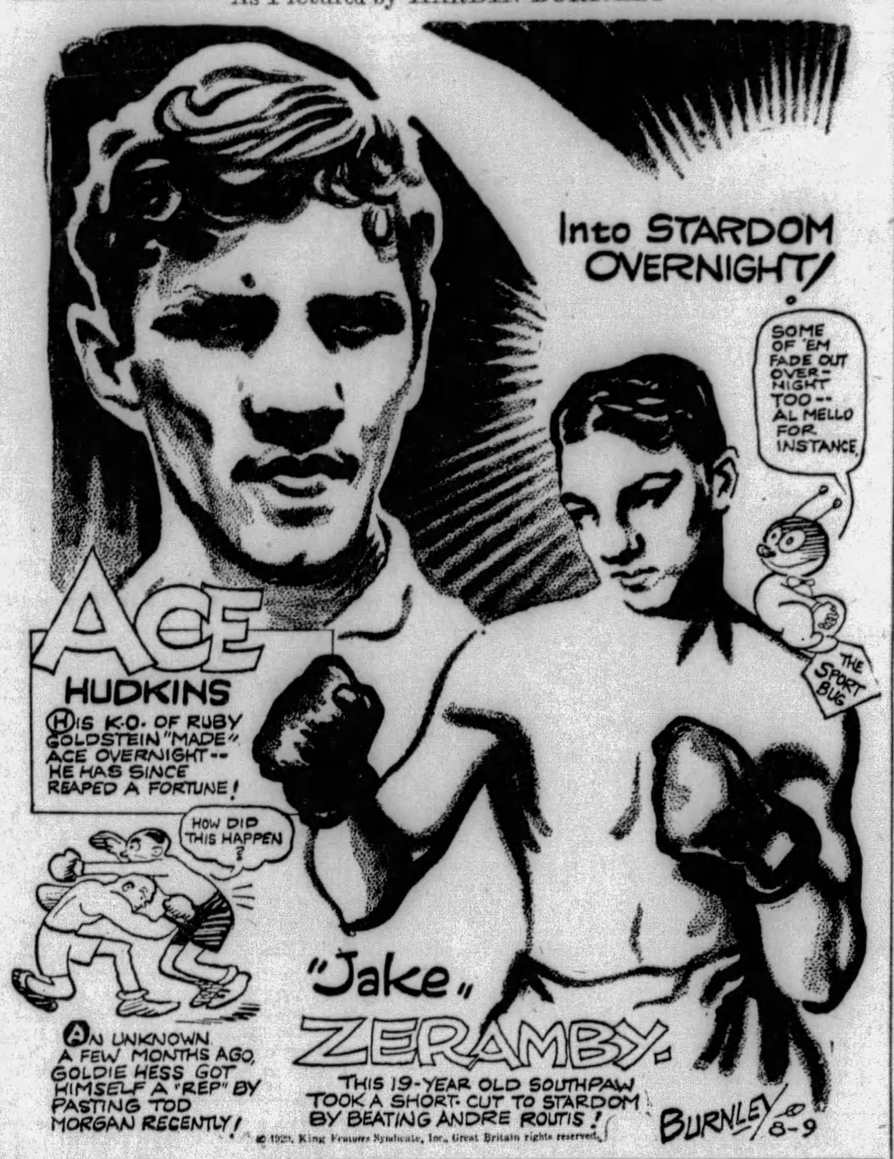
Overnight Reputations

As Pictured by HARDIN BURNLEY



THE chief trouble with "overnight reputations" is that, all too often, they are nothing more than proverbial "flashes in the pan." A champion boxer, for instance, enters the ring in the so-called "provinces" at catchweights and with his title not at stake. The champ is expecting a pop-over, or, at the most, a gymnasium style workout. The obscure opponent is primed or decides to surprise the champion. And he does. That wins an "overnight reputation" if nothing else.

Recently, Andre Routis, world featherweight champion, went through such an experience in Boston when Jake Zeramby, of Lynn, Mass.—"just a trial-horse"—gave the Frenchman a clean-cut beating in 10 rounds. The title was not at stake—but it is humiliating for a champion to get such a "showing-up."

About the same time, Goldie Hess tendered Tod Morgan, junior lightweight champ, a like surprise party on the Pacific Coast, much to the amusement of the many who do not like champions who are miserly in safeguarding their titles.

In both instances the hitherto boxing unknowns who whipped the champions were thrust into the national sportlight almost as soon as telegraph news stories of their bouts could be put into print.

Of course, sport annals are full of "overnight reputations"—perhaps the most notable in recent years being that of Wildcat Ace Hudkins, picked as a tough set-up for Ruby Goldstein. The Cat then proceeded to drape the latter in K. O. fashion over the ropes at Coney Island. The Ace got many big bouts as a result of that surprise, and, while winning no title as yet, he still is one of the public's favorite fighters.

More recently, James J. Braddock won overnight fame by quickly kaoying Tuffy Griffiths, who came to Madison Square Garden with a fearsome "rep." Braddock showed a mighty right on that and other nights, but he found no place to park it effectively when Tommy Loughran gave him a 15-round boxing lesson in their title tilt in New York last month.

Of all the ringsters who clicked overnight, the classic example is Young Corbett, who knocked out Champion Terry McGovern in the second round at Hartford, Conn., in 1901, and repeated the K. O. afterward in another thrilling duel. Young Corbett was no "flash in the pan" like most of those who leap into headlines too quickly.

After all, the typical "overnight reputation" was that of Al McCoy, who caught George Chip with a wild punch, thereby winning the world middleweight championship. For some time McCoy fought no-decision bouts only and soon became known as "The Cheese Champion," never living up to that Chip K. O. "rep."

PREHN RELATES PROFFER OF BIG BRIBE

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—The smoldering controversy over the refereeing of the Dempsey-Tunney world heavyweight championship fight at Soldier Field in September, 1927, today had burst into flame with the assertion of Paul Prehn, president of the National Boxing Association, that he was offered $10,000 to urge a particular individual as referee of the bout.

Prehn, who recently was ousted as chairman of the Illinois State Athletic Commission, said he was approached by a gambler, whose name he refused to divulge, who made the proffer, saying he wished to assure himself that the third man in the ring would not be pro-Tunney. The man was not selected, Prehn said.

Prehn hastened to say that he was certain Dempsey had nothing to do with the affair.

DEMPSEY NOT INVOLVED

"Dempsey probably never heard of the offer and I am certain no member of his camp was involved," Prehn said.

He related that the man had placed a thousand dollar bill on his desk and had told him that nine other notes of the same denomination would be his if he acceded to the request. Prehn also declined to name the man whom the gambler wished to serve as referee of the fight.

Prehn said he immediately rejected the offer and ordered the man from his office. He then told the other members of the commission what had occurred, he said. He averred that the proffer was made by gamblers who wished to protect their Dempsey wagers, fearing that some of the eligibles might lean to Tunney if the fight was close.

The eligibles mentioned before the fight is possibilities as referee were Dave Barry, who finally was selected; Dave Miller, well-known as a referee; Joe Choynski, former heavyweight fighter, who now is in the theatrical business in Chicago; Jimmy Gardner, former bantamweight boxer; Little Phil Collins, long identified with boxing here, and Tommy Thomas, another former boxer.

BARRY "FLABBERGASTED"

Prehn also insisted that Dave Barry, who became famous for the long count while Tunney was on the canvas, had no previous knowledge that he was to referee—in fact, Prehn said, Barry was "Flabbergasted and turned pale when I handed him the assignment." The assignment was made, Prehn said, after the principals had entered the ring.

Prehn related the incident yesterday in telling of the troubles encountered by the Illinois State Athletic Commission which he headed until his resignation and those of Al Mann and Sam Luzzo, recently were requested and received by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson.

NEW COMMISSION NAMED

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Gov. Emmerson today announced the membership of the new Illinois State Athletic Commission.

The new commissioners are George F. Getz, Chicago, millionaire coal operator and partner of Tex Rickard in promoting the Dempsey-Tunney fight two years ago; Gen. John V. Clinnin, former brigadier general in the Illinois National Guard, and Fred Gardner, Chicago banker.

The new commissioners succeed Paul Prehn, Al Mann and Samuel Luzzo, whose resignations were requested by Gov. Ammerson last week. Their resignations were hastened after the expose of the "ticket grab" of choice seats for the Mandell-Canzoneri fight in the Chicago Stadium last week. The retiring commissioners, investigation revealed, got a block of 959 choice tickets without paying for them at the time.

Gen. Clinnin, a veteran of the World War, will be chairman of the commission, succeeding Prehn. Gen. Clinnin long has been interested in amateur athletics. Gardner is vice president of the Illinois Central Bank and Trust Company and has been active in amateur athletics and golf.

The new commissioners are Chicagoans. They will have complete control of all boxing and wrestling affairs in Illinois.

BAN ON MAX JUSTIFIED

the fight of the latter's life and to beat him unless the Boston Sphinx is better than he has been in a couple of years. If Sharkey rises to the great heights of which he has been capable, he will win, but no half-hearted effort will suffice against Loughran, who so skillfully defended his 175-pound championship against the bid of Jimmy Braddock recently.

Pete Abate and Joe Dubranski, of McKeesport, partners in the management of boxers have split and each will handle his own string in the future.

Johnny Mellow, of Detroit, boxes Tug Phillips, formerly of Pittsburgh and now of Erie, in a 10-round bout at Erie tonight. Sid Terris meets Emory Cabana at Coney Island, with Pal Silvers boxing Tony Vaccarelli in the semi-final. Benny Tell and Mike Rodriguez battle in Brooklyn.

Cuddy De Marco will train at Terra Alta, W. Va., for his 10-round bout with Tiger Joe Randall at McKeesport, August 22. Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, a stablemate of De Marco, will help him in his workouts.

CARD IS COMPLETE

The card has been completed for the show at the Jolly Bowl, New Castle, next Monday night. Sailor Fay Kosky, of California and Chicago, will meet Jackie Dugan, of Louisville, in the 10-round main bout; Harold Scarney, Youngstown heavyweight, opposes Frank Florian, of Cleveland, in the semi-final, and Zivic Anthony, of Pittsburgh, clashes with Jack De Neri, of Cleveland, in the other six-rounder, while, in two four-round bouts, Joe Midway, of New Castle, takes on Joe Juhasz, of Beaver Falls, and Hammer Sledge, of Butler, engages Tom Farrow, of New Castle.

Matchmaker Ed Fritz, of the Jolly Bowl, is trying to sign a good middleweight to meet Johnny Burns, of Chicago, stablemate of Sailor Kosky, in his main bout, August 19. Spug Myers is being sought to box Paris Cangey in the windup, August 25.

Matchmaker Jules Beck, of the Meyers Bowl, of North Braddock, having completed his card for his Benny Schwartz-Bushy Graham show next Monday night, now is at work on some future attractions. He is seeking an opponent for Maxie Rosenbloom, New York light-heavyweight, who is a good card here, for one week from Monday, and is on the lookout for a worthy opponent for Tony Herrera the following Monday.

BAD THROWS COSTLY

The game was lost to Alexander and the Cards through a couple of bad throws uncorked by Charlie Gelbert, youthful shortstop of the invading team. The promising boy let loose of two wild heaves in the fourth inning, the four runs accredited the Pirates being the result of his fielding lapse.

Alexander worked three fine innings before the Pirates broke through to score enough tallies to put the game away. The Cardinals were first to score, however, Taylor Douthit driving in Jimmy Wilson in the third. The centerfielder doubled down the leftfield line.

Lloyd Waner nicked Aleck for a lucky hit to start the fourth, the ball falling between Gelbert and Hafey. Brother Paul whacked a double to left that put Lloyd within the scoring zone. Traynor grounded to Gelbert, who should have thrown Brother Lloyd out at the plate, but his high toss made Jimmy Wilson jump desperately and when he came back to the earth he could not touch the wee centerfielder. The ball fell away from Jim and when Paul and Pie advanced a base, the catcher was charged with an error.

DICK HITS HOMER

Alexander then made Brickell hit a bounder to the box and the veteran threw out the kid while holding the runners. Up came Comorosky to match Traynor's grounder to Gelbert. This time Gelbert had the other Waner stopped, but he threw the ball low to the stands as Paul and Pie rode over, Comorosky running all the way to third on the low fling. Hemsley followed through with a single and Commy counted.

The fifth tally made by the Pirates, an event of the fifth, was a real run. Dick Bartell measured one of Aleck's offerings for a homer to the centerfield fence.

YANKS CUT A'S LEAD; START WESTERN TRIP

MACK HURLERS SHOW SIGNS OF SLUMP

Associated Press.

The Yankees are on their way west for their final invasion, possessors of whatever satisfaction may be gleaned from having taken two out of three from the leaders while themselves languishing almost a dozen games to the rear.

The 6-to-4 victory of the champions in Philadelphia yesterday carried with it the edge in the three-game series and reduced the margin of the Mackmen to a mere 10½ games.

The Yankees of last season, overdue two years for a slump, were about eight games out front at this period of the race, and then ran into a batting decline of serious proportions, supplemented by the failure of Herbert Pennock to win another victory until long after the 1929 race had been started.

RECOVER IN TIME

The Yankees did blow the rest of the lead, but they recovered in time to crush the Athletics three times in that memorable four-game series on the banks of the Harlem last September.

The one faint gleam of real Yankee hope seems to be in the fact that Connie Mack's first line pitchers do show signs of fatigue; but what of Huggins' tossers? Hoyt, out of the game with blood-poisoning; Pennock, still uncertain; Pipgras, unable to pitch two strong games in succession.

Pitted against George Walberg in the get-away game at Philadelphia yesterday, Herb Pennock so toyed with what at one time was a 6 to 1 lead that Wilcy Moore was called from the bull pen with none out in the fifth. Mule Haas had just hit a homer and Cochrane had singled. Wilcy, pitching five official innings, allowed just one hit, and in the National League would have received credit for the victory. The American League rules, however, require a starting pitcher to go only four innings to win.

TIGERS BEAT TRIBE

A ninth-inning rally for four runs enabled Detroit to nose out the Indians at Cleveland by 9 to 6 and so to prevent Peckinpaugh's ambitious boys from stepping into third place. The Browns obligingly lost two games to the White Sox at Chicago by scores of 5 to 4 and 6 to 2, and fell back into a tie with Cleveland for third even in the face of the Indian defeat.

Washington again nosed out the Red Sox at Fenway Park. The score was 4 to 3.

The only action along the National League front again took place in Pittsburgh, where the Pirates won over the Cardinals by 5 to 1 behind Ervin Brame's three-hit pitching. The game was notable chiefly for the failure of Grover Cleveland Alexander to register his three hundred and seventy-third National League victory, which would have bettered the league record, now shared by old Pete and the late Christy Mathewson. A poor throw by Gelbert in the fourth paved the way for four Pirate runs, which wrecked old Alex.

JACOBS BOWS TO TILDEN IN DOUBLES

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Bill Tilden and Frank Hunter, home from the tennis wars abroad, started play in the doubles phase of the Meadow Club's invitation tennis tournament here today and with two victories reached the semi-final round.

After drawing a bye in the opening round, they polished off schoolboy members of the Southampton colony, James Lee and William Richardson, 6-0, 6-3, but were forced to come from behind to beat Bruce Barnes, of the University of Texas, and Eddie Jacobs, of the University of Pittsburgh, 5-7, 6-3, 6-4.

HARMON SEEKS MAXIE BOUT

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—Promoter Paddy Harmon today faced the tasks of talking Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, into accepting terms for a bout between Herr Max and Phil Scott, British heavyweight, in the Chicago Stadium late this month, or of finding another opponent for the English boxer.

Scott yesterday accepted Harmon's terms for an appearance here and the latter immediately wired an offer to Jacobs at Spokane, Wash., but Jacobs told the Associated Press at Spokane that he "isn't interested—don't even want to talk about it."

Failure of Schmeling to meet Scott in New York caused the New York State Athletic Commission to suspend Herr Max, with the result that the Madison Square Garden Corporation has been forced to drop plans for a match between Schmeling and Jack Sharkey, of Boston.

The Garden corporation accepted the New York Commission's ruling against the Sharkey-Schmeling bout in New York, but attempted to arrange to hold it in Chicago or Detroit. These plans fell through and William F. Carey, of the Madison Square Garden Corporation, announced yesterday that Tommy Loughran, world light-heavyweight champion, would be substituted for Schmeling against Sharkey.

Alex the Great Pitches Fine Game, Fails to Break Record

LOOKING UP RECORD

Pitcher Grover Cleveland Alexander, at 42 a veteran of 19 years in the National League, lost a tough 5-1 game to the Pirates at Forbes Field yesterday when his supporting cast on the Cardinals' club failed him as he tried to pitch himself out of a hole in the fourth inning, four runs resulting. He allowed only five hits in seven innings and bowed to young Ervin Brame, who permitted three. The game was played in 1 hour and 19 minutes, the shortest of the season here. Before the battle, Alex thumbed the record books as scribes called his attention to the fact that if he won he would surpass Christy Mathewson's National League record of victories, 372, which Alex equaled last week.

HE'S GETTING OLD

THE MASTER WORKMAN

VETERAN ALEX MISSES MARK

major league record, Cy having copped 511 games in the National and American before he hung up his glove and went back to more peaceful pursuits.

"Well, I guess it's just as well that way," said the uncomplaining Aleck, after partaking of a good meal last night. He held the Pirates to five hits in seven frames and did not walk a batter, yet there was no regrets from him because the Pirates had won through field wobbles. Brame's performance was a classic, but Alexander's' was just as good. The way he made our star hitters top the ball on the infield in the crisis of the fourth was the work of a master.

TAKES IT CALMLY

"If the Pirates hadn't made those runs, we might be out there playing yet," mused the patriarch, laughingly.

There was quite a lot of speed in the Pirate battlefront yesterday. The Waner boys, Traynor, Comorosky, Brickell and Hemsley all are sprinters. Brickell offers a problem to Bush. The Kansan is a sturdy boy who packs a punch at the plate and he is one of the swiftest boys in the league, but it is hard for him to stay in the thick of the fight.

Charlie Gelbert, the kid shortfielder, whose inaccurate throws hurt the Redbirds in the first game, looks like the proverbial million in many ways. The rangy kid at times looks like one of the best shortstops in the game and perhaps he will come into his own in another year.

HOLD BIG EDGE

The Cardinals had a sweet shortstop last year who didn't seem to get much credit for the big part he played in winning the National League flag for St. Louis. And there is no shortstop in the sport who has enjoyed a bigger year than the Maranville of this season.

The Pirates have been especially hard on the Cardinals this year. Yesterday's victory made it 12 out of 14 for the season to date, with a tie game sandwiched in.

Fight Results

At New Brighton—Tiger Joe Randall won by a technical knockout over Mike Lucas, 9 rounds Mickey Solmen and Chuck Zelnack drew, 8 rounds; Patsy Perrone defeated Walter Pickard, 6 rounds; Young Jacobs defeated Bud Morrison, 6 rounds; Bus Hardy defeated Gunboat Smith 4 rounds.

At Benton Harbor—Sammy Price defeated Henry Perlick, 10 rounds.

At Scranton—Manuel Quintero defeated Johnny Hayes, 10 rounds; George Saunders defeated Eddie Clark, 8 rounds.

At Greenwood, Miss.—Red Herring defeated Alex Simms, 10 rounds.

At Davenport, Ia.—Cowboy Art Dula defeated Haakon Hansen, 10 rounds.

At New York—Al Ridgway defeated Al (Rube) Goldeberg, 10 rounds; Eddie Dowling defeated Fred Monte, 10 rounds.

SMILERS PLAY REINECKERS

By TOM BIRKS.

The W. L. Reineckers will be the attraction at Wilson Field this evening, meeting the Pleasant Valley Smilers. Seeing that the Smilers are leading the City loop by a scant margin, it is expected that the Dunsky outfit will make strenuous efforts to cop this battle.

The Reineckers are having a tough time getting going. Probably the Hill club will make a far better showing next season, when the club officials have a chance to get together the right kind of material for the City League race. The Reineckers did not fall over themselves trying to get into the City loop. In fact, they found themselves boosted into the circuit without any effort on their part. Now that they are in, some good talent will probably be lined up next spring and the team put on an even basis with the other clubs in the league.

C.-I. TEAMS CLASH

Kaufmann's will play its final game in the Commercial and Industrial loop this evening meeting the Carnegie Steel nine at Etna. The Big Store nine extended Gimbels in the game at Garfield Park recently.

The second half race in the C. & I. is a hummer. Reick-McJunkin and Carnegie Steel are fighting to see who will meet the Gimbel nine in the post-season playoff. Gimbels defeated Joseph Horne at Camp Horne on Wednesday, Gil Scannel pitching a wonderful game.

In the West Penn loop, Universal will meet Cheswick at Cheswick this evening. It is impossible, however, for any club to catch that Verona Community outfit. Bill Bright's club won the gonfalon last evening.

GRAYS MEET GIANTS

Only a few games separate the Homestead Grays from first place in the American Negro League and the series starting this evening with the Bacharach Giants at Forbes Field, offers the proteges of Cum Posey an opportunity to improve their standing.

The Grays and Giants will play four games, the second game being billed for tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock with a double header carded at the Sharon Elks' lot on Sunday.

The American Negro League race is so close that five clubs stand a chance of grabbing the second half pennant. The Cubans alone, are entirely out of the race and a spurt by any of the other contestants would place them on top.

VERONA "IN"

Verona clinched the second half and league championship in the West Penn League last evening, defeating Cheswick, 11 to 4. As the Community nine won the first half race also, the West Penn season may be declared to be over as far as any of the other teams getting anywhere is concerned.

In a second league game, North Bessemer defeated Wilmerding, 12 to 5.

Book Shoe put a spike in the second-half titular aspirations of Reliance Life in a City League game, defeating the Lifers 6 to 4. The Reineckers defeated J. L. Thomas 7 to 6. Immaculate Heart won over Ben Avon in a North Side League fracas, 8 to 6.

LINEYS VICTORS

In the Steel City League, the Herron Hill Cards defeated the I. K. S. Moores, 10 to 2. Hawthorne took a 2-to-1 game from the Presbyterians in the Crafton Church League. J. A. Lineys defeated the Lincoln Civics 7 to 1 in a Central Pittsburgh League contest.

A big crowd watched the Duquesne Light team and the Byllesby outfit battle to a 5-5 tie in a Philadelphia Company League feature.

Among the independent battles, the Cuyler Cubs, with the Dublin boys starring, defeated the Reeves Club 13 to 4. Edgewood downed Whitaker 10 to 2, and Swissvale walloped the Homestead Aces 11 to 2.

Reese and Deible Battle for Title

BEDFORD SPRINNGS, Pa., Aug. 9.—Jack Reese defeated M. J. Tenney, Jr., 3 and 2, and C. W. Deible eliminated Lawrence Semans, 1 up, in the semi-final round of the annual invitation tournament at the Bedford Springs Golf Club.

Reese and Deible started play this morning in the 36-hole fight for the championship.

Tiger Joe Randall Stops Mike Lucas

NEW BRIGHTON, Pa., Aug. 9.—Tiger Joe Randall's knockout record took another boost here last night, when the Elizabeth slugger scored a technical knockout over Mike Lucas, of Cleveland, in the ninth round of a scheduled 10-round bout. Randall doubled Lucas up with a hard left to the mid-section that sent the defeated Mike through the ropes, and he rolled out of the ring. His manager tossed in the towel.

The semi-final between Mickey Solmen, of New Castle, and Chuck Zelnack, of Glassport, ended in a draw. Patrick Perrone, of Canton, won the decision in six rounds from Walter Pickard, of Youngstown. Young Jacobs, of Canonsburg, won the decision from Bud Morrison, of Canton, in a good fight. Bus Hardy, of Beaver Falls, won handily over Gunboat Smith, of Washington, Pa.

BOWEN VICTOR OVER PELTZER

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Aug. 9.—Three victories went to the team of touring American college athletes in the opening of the international invitation track and field meet of the Goeta Sporting Club in the Stockholm Stadium yesterday.

Pete Bowen

Leo Lermond scored the most brilliant victory, beating out Harry Larva, of Finland, in the 1,500-meter run. Lermond turned in the fast time of 3:56 2-5.

Leo Sexton, Georgetown weight ace, won the shot put with a toss of 13.97 meters (45 feet 8 21-32 inches); W. Doberman, of Germany, was second with a heave of 13.74 meters (45 feet 31-22 inches), and Paavo Yrjoclae, of Finland, third with 12.95 meters (43 feet 9 49-64 inches).

Lyon Meets Redmond In Junior Golf Final

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—The battle for the western junior golf championship today, at LaGrange Country Club, was to be a University of Illinois-Notre Dame battle, with Fred Lyon, of Pontiac, Ill., unofficially representing the former and William Redmond, of Joliet, Ill., swinging clubs for the South Bend institution.

Lyon, medalist in the qualifying round, crowded his way into the final by defeating a pair of Michigan players yesterday. He eliminated Joel Shepherd, of Kalamazoo, in his third round test, and conquered Alex Jolly, of Menominee, in the semi-final.

Redmond, who was runner-up to Lyon in the qualifying play, put out George Baker, of St. Louis, and finished his march to the title round by trimming Charles Becka, the only Chicagoan to reach the semi-finals.

FASTER TICKER SERVICE FOR EXCHANGE

High Speed Equipment to Replace Present Machines By Early Next Year

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—In less than a year's time the stock ticker, as Wall street and the country at large now know it, will be a thing of the past. Those who daily watch the rise and fall of stocks will obtain their information from a new machine, entirely diffifferent from the one now used.

The present ticker and the method of reporting quotations has been the development of a number of years, but in the unprecedented rush of business which developed in the early part of 1928, the existing system was swamped and quotations were many minutes late in appearing on the stock tape. For some time the Stock Exchange has been engaged in the task of providing more rapid reporting of quotations, the principal part of which involved a new machine. Already at work on the new system, it became necessary to speed up the old tickers, and this was so successfully performed that they are now printing about 300 characters a minute, thereby keeping the country informed promptly, except on a few occasions, of what is happening on the floor of the Exchange.

OLD TICKERS RISKY

But the threat of an extremely heavy turnover of stocks which would overwhelm the existing ticker facilities has been ever present, and now the New York Quotation Company, which supplies the stock quotations to the members of the Exchange, is ready to begin the actual job of changing over the machines.

To the public the task is simply one of putting a new ticker where an old one is now in operation, but behind this comparatively simple change lies an important technical problem. The new ticker is fundamentally different from the old ticker and requires an entirely different operating plant, so that at the present time plants for each of the systems are in existence and in operation. In addition to this it was necessary to perfect a system of dual control, by which both tickers receive their information from the same source, yet the new, high-speed ticker does not print the quotations ahead of the old-time tickers.

SPEEDS VARY

For this reason, the new tickers are run at their full speed of 492.6 characters a minute while operating. But they only run for a few seconds, stopping to permit the old ticker to catch up with them, and then the high-speed ticker starts again. By this method, those who receive early installation of the new tickers receive no preference in the matter of quotations over those who use the old tickers up to the end. It has also been necessary to build up a new organization to handle the new tickers, at the same time keeping the old one up to its operating pitch.

Since the first of the year the New York Quotation Company has operated a number of circuits of the new machine under the direct jurisdiction of the stock exchange. These tickers have been carrying the full markets and have been in the nature of test circuits, which have disclosed problems not developed in the laboratories. A number of changes were made in the first machines as a result of these tests, and the machines are now ready for general installation.

CIRCUIT INSTALLED

About a month ago the first circuit was installed outside the direct jurisdiction of the stock exchange and last week two additional circuits were put in operation.

It is planned to continue the installation of the new tickers at the rate of about two circuits a week until a total of 100 or 150 machines are operating. When that point is reached, installations will be halted while the organization behind the machines is completed. This done, installation of the high-speed tickers will be resumed and pushed forward at the best possible pace. According to present plans this intensive installation program should begin in October or November and about four circuits of from eight to 18 tickers each should be installed daily, eliminating the old ticker the early part of next year.

REPLACEMENT PROBLEM

The New York Quotation Company is faced with the task of replacing approximately 3,000 stock tickers, and the Western Union Telegraph Company, which furnishes quotations to customers other than stock exchange houses, has approximately 7,000 old tickers to replace, so that the entire job, apart from the huge technical problem, requires the installation of about 10,000 new stock tickers.

The same company supplies the New York Quotation Company and the Western Union Telegraph Company with new tickers. These will be distributed to the operating companies on a basis enabling both to complete work at the same time. When this is completed, and all the old type tickers replaced, the retarding effect of the old tickers will be removed and the new machines will be operated continuously at their maximum speed, or as the market requires. This guarantees all sections of the country equal quotation service.

Glidden to Make Payments in Stock

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—A. D. Joyce, president of the Glidden Company, paint and varnish manufacturers, of Cleveland, said today that it was the intention of the directors to continue payment of a quarterly dividend of one per cent in stock instead of extra cash dividend.

Ayres Not Scared By Discount Rate Rise

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9. — Col. Leonard P. Ayes, vice president of Cleveland Trust Company, believes there probably will be no serious results from the increase in the New York rediscount rate.

This was a belated action that was expected some time ago, Mr. Ayres said, which bears out the policy of the Federal Reserve system to keep the rediscount rate between the commercial paper rate and that for acceptances. It seems likely this move will have a tendency to stabilize the various rates and may reduce the cost of call money. High call rates are the main reason for attracting gold to this country and with chances favorable call rates will not go higher and may be reduced, with probability of an increase in gold from England decreasing.

RUBBER REPORT IMPROVED

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(A.P.)—The United States Rubber Company in its first earnings report since the Du Pont interests took control announced net income of $596,926 for the first six months of the year. This is an improvement of $2,686,923 over the first six months of 1928, when expressed comparably. In addition there was a loss of $14,147,659 last year due to the adjustment of rubber value in all inventories, as of June 30, 1928.

No adjustment in value of inventories was necessary as of June 30, last, President F. B. Davis, Jr., stated. No dividends were taken from the plantations company the first six months of this year, Mr. Davis pointed out, whereas $1,000,000 was received during the first six months of 1928.

Net income of the plantations company amounted to approximately $350,000, none of which was included in the consolidated earnings of the parent company.

Bank loans were reduced $23,250,000 since the first of the year from funds obtained through the sale of common stock in January. Funding indebtedness amounting to $2,903,000 was retired.

Consolidation of activities, Mr. Davis said, had permitted the closing of two additional plants since the first of the year, with consideration being given to further consolidations.

Net sales amounted to $86,073,346 for the six months, an increase of $1,892,240 over the corresponding 1928 period on a comparable basis.

Steel had taken a 90-day option on their concern.

Vanadium Reports Improved Earnings

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Net income of $1,177,688 for six months to June 30, after depreciation and federal taxes, against $969,492 in the 1928 period is reported by Vanadium Corporation. This is equal to $3.13 a share on 376,637 capital shares, against $969,492, or $2.57 a share in the 1928 period.

STOCK PRICES BREAK 5 TO 30 POINTS

Midday Rally Fails to Check Wave of Selling Caused by Rate Raise

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(AP.)—The Federal Reserve's latest thrust at securities speculation—an increase from 5 to 6 per cent in the New York bank rate—brought about one of the sharpest reactions today in the history of the New York Stock Exchange.

Prices of leading stocks broke 5 to nearly 30 points in the public's mad scramble to get out of the market, with indications that the day's sales would run around 7,000,000 shares.

The increase in the rate, which coincided with a gain of $60,000,000 in Federal Reserve brokers' loans to a new high record above $6,000,000,000, caught Wall Street completely by surprise.

BIG BLOCKS SOLD

Blocks of 5,000 to 25,000 shares changed hands at frequent intervals in the early trading, with initial declines in most issues ranging from 2 to 15 points. As soon as the first flurry of selling had subsided, a brisk rally developed which sent several stocks 1 to 10 points above their opening quotations. The buying quickly dried up, however, and a fresh wave of liquidation swept over the market at mid-day, which carried U. S. Steel common, Westinghouse, Atchison and many other industrial and railroad leaders below their opening quotations.

This "secondary reaction" undermined speculative confidence, as several of the large commission houses had advised their customers that the opening quotation probably would remain as the lows of the day, if not for some time to come.

CALL MONEY UNCHANGED

The higher Federal Reserve rate brought no immediate change in the credit situation, although it was generally believed that the sharp deflation in security values would gradually ease the stringent monetary conditions. Call money renewed unchanged at 8 per cent, with time money rates firm around 9 per cent. No immediate change was made in the open market rate on bankers' acceptances as a result of the action by several Federal Reserve banks in reducing their buying rate for bills from 5¼ to 5⅛ per cent.

While the recent action of the market, with spectacular advances in many of the public utility and high priced industrial stocks, had drawn warnings from conservative bankers and commission houses, but few traders were prepared for such a sweeping decline.

There had been a rather general feeling in the financial district that an increase in the Federal Reserve rate, previously characterized as "the last resort" of the Federal Reserve Board by Chairman Young, would be preceded by a higher rate by the Bank of England, which has suffered a serious decline in its gold reserves as a result of heavy shipments to France. Consequently, when the London rate was announced as unchanged yesterday, no increase was looked for here.

BROKERS LOANS AT RECORD

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Loans to brokers and dealers by New York Federal Reserve member banks for the week ending August 7, were announced by the Federal Reserve Board today, as $6,020,000,000, representing an increase of $60,000,000, as compared with the preceding week and establishing a new high record for the fourth consecutive week.

This is the first time in history that the loans have exceeded the $6,000,000,000 mark.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Simultaneously with the $60,000,000 increase in brokers' loans, the New York Federal Reserve Bank announced an increase in rediscount rate from 5 to 6 per cent, thereby providing the outstanding surprise development of 1929 financial news. Although credit has been tight and call money rates have been high for some months, no intimation of any such unexpected move has been heard in local financial circles. The Federal Reserve, however, to some extent supplied a balancing factor in lowering buying rate of bankers' bills, through which medium much of the fall's crop and industrial credit requirements are financed from 5¼ to 5⅛ per cent. This latter move is expected to bring in a flood of bills for discount, thus relieving the pressure in other directions and bringing about gradual ease in money rates as a whole.

Wilcox Oil and Gas Net for Half Kites

Wilcox Oil and Gas Company reports for six months ended June 30 net profit of $222,784 after interest, depreciation, depletion, taxes, against only $88,184 in same period of 1928.

Simmons Company Sales On Increase

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The Simmons Company, bed and spring manufacturers, reports July sales amounting to $4,120,604, as against $2,896,716 in July, 1928, an increase of more than 42 per cent.

Kansas City Bank Rate Remains Same

The Kansas City Federal Reserve Bank made no change in its 5 per cent rediscount rate.

To Become the Principal You Must Have the Interest

By B. C. FORBES

PERHAPS in these hot days you may derive a little bracing-up from one or two of these home-made paragraphs:

TO become the principal you must have interest.

THE loafer ultimately finds himself without bread.

NEVER change principles, only policies.

GIVING birth to an idea is one thing; raising it to maturity is another.

TO hit the bull's eye, aim high.

KNOW definitely what you are after or you are unlikely to overtake it.

A SWELLED head doesn't bring a like bank account.

IF you constantly lose your temper, why should you be trusted with other things?

TO GET ahead: Look ahead, think ahead, plan ahead, plod ahead.

THE fellow who digs in never has to be dug out.

REGRETS and excuses are unmarketable.

TRYING to win without work won't work.

DEFEAT avoids those who refuse to know it.

GENIUSES are usually eccentric, but being eccentric doesn't stamp you a genius.

TIMES change and we change with them—if we are wise.

SUCCESS without honesty is failure.

LEAP a high obstacle and the going is usually smoother.

UNLESS you learn to like your job it won't treat you well.

TAKE care of the work and the credit will take care of itself.

WORRY over only the things you can mend.

PITCH your deserts high, your expectations low.

FRIENDS seldom go back on you unless you've gone back on yourself.

IF you can't make things come right, then take things as they come.

EARLY striving leads to thriving.

THE chap who is always "on the go" is in danger of going to the bad.

BECOME obsessed with "getting even" and you won't get ahead.

PLAN for tomorrow—but plod today.

ASPIRATION without perspiration brings vexation.

COMERS are not complainers.

GETTING up is largely a matter of never giving up.

WHEN the worst comes, better is round the corner, of course.

FIRM LEADERS LABOR UNDER STRAIN

Business Now Co-Respondent In Divorce as Duties Keep Chiefs from Home

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Mergers and natural growth are making the larger corporations so huge that the chief executives labor under a terrific strain.

The most important consideration in consolidations is manpower at the top.

Holding down the chief executive's chair in a great corporation is a full-time job, and leaves little leisure for hobbies and for family life. The wife of the president of the largest public utility concern in the world introduced into the courts of Reno, Nev., a new type of co-respondent—work. Jealous of the devotion given by the executive to his business activities, the unhappy wife charged that her husband gave too much time to business dinners and functions, and neglected his home life.

OVERWORK HARI KARI

It was said of the late E. H. Harriman that he committed hari kari through overwork. The present pace in business is even faster than while Mr. Harriman lived, but today there is a better division of authority. One-man concerns are being replaced by great co-operative enterprises, in which many individuals work together, with the president acting as chief of staff, who plans and co-ordinates. Older chief executives are tending to become chairmen of the board, and are ready to relinquish day-to-day management to younger men who fill the presidential chairs. Moreover, the habit of summer and winter vacations is spreading and giving busy men an opportunity to replenish their energies.

And yet unquestionably some higher ambitious men give so much to their business that they leave little time for their wives and children. To do this is not to lead a genuinely successful life. Living should not be forgotten in the race to gain a livelihood. Even the busiest executive should schedule several evenings a week for his family, and should not permit the pressure of commercial obligations to interfere.

These observations are made without regard to the merits of the allegations in any particular divorce suit. They are made, however, in recognition that a new co-respondent, business, has come between some husbands and wives.

ROMANCE OF BUSINESS

The chief adventure of modern life is business, for business has embraced all the sciences and the arts.

The epic attempt of the Graf Zeppelin to circumnavigate the globe illustrates the romance of business.

Such incidents help to contradict the assertion that the machine age makes for dullness and absence of color in business life.

Nowadays business attracts the flower of the land, including many superior men who in another age would have gone into the learned professions or into the Army.

Business, which is wedded to the dynamic view that progress can be unending, nowadays stirs the imagination as never before, and offers to a variety of talents far more than the mere pursuit of pecuniary gain.

The Hearst-Zeppelin-Round-World Flight is another incident in the effort to annihilate distance, and make the whole world kin. Faster travel promotes trade and stimulates the backward countries to raise their economic standards up to the levels of the more progressive.

Whether the ultimate air travel will be in heavier than air or lighter than air planes, the Hearst flight promotes airmindedness in the United States.

Although a wide variety of promoters and amateurs have already entered commercial aviation to make fortunes quickly, it is noteworthy that outstanding financiers and industrialists have also entered the new industry, and it is therefore comparatively easy to select the pioneer companies which are destined to have excellent management. The mortality among the other concerns is likely to be especially heavy during the coming years.

CHECK ON BROKERS

Flourishing conditions in Wall Street have given fresh hope to charlatans who lurk in the shadow of the legitimate brokerage houses. Assistant United States Attorney General George J. Mintzer, in New York, announced plans to look into the affairs of 100 alleged offenders, including publishers of tipster sheets, bucket shops and bogus stock sellers. And yet the financial public generally is unquestionably more sophisticated than in the past, placing a larger proportion of its funds in good stocks listed on bona fide exchanges than ever before.

No amateur, however, should deal with a broker without checking his integrity through independent sources. Membership in an exchange or in the investment bankers' association of America is a sign of strength.

Fakers can fool the inexperienced, but if the customers will ask their bankers or the financial editor of their newspaper they can readily get a line on such houses. Unless assured of the honesty of a broker, it is always safer to buy stocks and bonds through a bank, which will assume the responsibility of picking out a dependable broker. It costs no more to buy securities through a bank or a trust company.

Pgh. Coal Spurt Revives Land Sale Rumors

THE Pittsburgh Coal Company stocks indulged in one of their periodical gymnastic displays yesterday when the common rushed up 12 points and the preferred advanced 11. The incident was one of the market sensations of the day, being second in importance only to the colorful movement in United States Steel common which forced its way to a new all-time record price of 221⅛.

For whose account the coal purchases were made could not, of course, be learned but it was said here that most of the buying was through New York houses while a comparatively small part of the trading was reported as coming from here. The volume of transactions was small as measured by present-day activities in the stock market but dealings in both the common and preferred have been at a minimum for months so that, measured by recent trading, yesterday's turnover in the coals was unusually large.

Both Stocks in Demand.

AS USUAL, the street was mystified by the sudden spurt which carried the common up from 68 to 80 and the preferred from 88⅝ to 99⅞. Explanations were sought but met the customary replies that there were no new developments in the company's affairs to account for the sharp advance. In the absence of official information, the trading elements concocted its own stories and various rumors were gossiped back and forth throughout the financial district.

The story which seemed to command the most attention was that a deal for part of the company's enormous coal holdings has finally reached the stage where it may be definitely regarded as being "under way." Each successive flurry in the shares has brought this rumor forward and each time it has died down of its own accord when activity in the stocks ceased.

May Retire Preferred.

BUT market observers here who held to the contention that the deal is "on," were more insistent than ever yesterday that results of the reported negotiations will be made known shortly. According to their contentions, the transaction, when concluded, will provide funds with which to retire the preferred stock and, if the company elects, pay off its funded debt.

As of January 1, this year there were approximately $1,750,000 of 5 per cent debentures outstanding, all of which have been called as of September 1. Early in the year the company issued $20,000,000 of 6 per cent debentures, part of which proceeds, it was stated, would be used to retire the 5 per cents. The latter are callable at par and interest, while the 6 per cents are callable at 105 and interest. The $20,000,000 of 6 per cents is part of an authorized issue of $25,000,000, the remaining $5,000,000 being available on the trustee's approval for various corporate purposes.

Back Dividends.

THE retirement of the preferred stock has been expected in financial circles for some time. There are 350,000 shares of 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock (par $100) outstanding. The issue is callable at 110 and accrued dividends, in addition to which the accumulation is entitled to 6 per cent interest. At the beginning of 1926 the company found it necessary to pass the dividend on the preferred and none has been paid since. This suspension has resulted in an accumulation, including interest, of about $20 a share as of April this year.

Redemption of the preferred stock would require something around $46,000,000 on the basis of the call price of $110 a share, the accumulation of approximately $20 a share and the dividend which would be due at the middle of the year. Should the company also plan to retire the 6 per cent debentures, an additional $21,000,000 would be involved together with the $1,750,000 necessary to take up the 5 per cents already called. However, since the 6 per cents were issued only this year, the talk of their retirement at this early date seems premature.

U. S. Steel Rumored Buyer.

AS TO the deal which the street is discussing, the money involved and the location of the holding are referred to only vaguely. Heretofore when the subject has been under discussion the accepted idea was that the United States Steel Corporation desired certain lands owned by Pittsburgh Coal. Acquisition of certain of the latter's properties would provide a distant future reserve of fuel for the steel corporation and would not impair Pittsburgh Coal's position as the leading company in its field.

HEAVY SELLING HITS STOCKS

Over 1,300,000 shares of stock were dumped on the New York Exchange in the first half hour of trading this morning, representing the accumulation of overnight selling orders resulting from the raise in the New York Federal Reserve Bank's rediscount rate.

Initial quotations were from 3 to 15 points under last night's closings, and blocks of stock ranging from 5,000 to 25,000 shares passed over the tape in rapid succession.

Steel common's first price was 216, off 4⅞ points, while Anaconda was down 7⅛ at 114. New York Central opened 5 points lower. Other losses noted on the opening were: Westinghouse Electric, 8¼ points; United Corporation, 3 points; Montgomery Ward, 5⅛; Radio, 3; General Motors, 3⅝; Packard, 9⅛; Consolidated Gas, 6¾; American and Foreign Power, 12¾; Goodyear Rubber, 10, and American Can, 5.

Strong support met the tidal wave of liquidation and prices in the key issues rallied moderately in the first 20 minutes of trading. Anaconda appeared to be one of the strongest issues in the list as it worked its way back up 3 points to 117 immediately after the initial heavy blocks had been absorbed. Steel rallied a point or so and similar recoveries were noted in other pivotal stocks.

There was no "distress" selling as the brokerage interests stated that accounts were well margined. This morning's offerings were mostly for account of traders who felt it the better course to liquidate all or part of their holdings and await further and more definite indications of what response the market will make to the Reserve Board's attempt to prevent additional absorption of the national credit in the securities markets.

A SUGGESTION

An ideal jaunt through the foothills of the Alleghenies leads from Pittsburgh on route No. 30 through Wilmerding, Jeannette and Greensburg to Ligonier, as shown on the chart above. Good restaurants make Ligonier a fine place to eat lunch, or a picnic basket can be enjoyed in the woods of the district. On the return trip, turn off route No. 30 at Greensburg, swinging over to Delmont on route No. 60, and back to Pittsburgh on the William Penn Highway, route No. 22.

BUGS BAER Says

SAY IT WITH PUZZLES

WE got an eyeful of that modernistic architecture the other day.

Fortunately, we didn't have to make two trips.

"Bugs" Baer

Got it all in one lead.

They say that architecture is frozen music. They also said that Senator Clark's mansion must have been frapped ragtime.

Which makes modernistic decorating chilled dischords which have been thawed out.

We don't know who started this idiotic panoramic building. But it shows strong tincture of Mattewan influence.

Mattewan is one of those laughing academies in New York state where paper hats are formal.

We will try to describe modernistic technique in a bag of words.

The parlor of your home looks like the garage of Noah's ark. The wallpaper is made of broken glass.

The divans are collapsible. When you try to rest on a divan it folds up and you find you are on a diving board on the roof.

If there is smoke coming out of the chimney it doesn't mean anything because there are goldfish in the furnace.

When you try to step into the bathtub you fall down a flight of circular stairs.

Your front door is in the rear and the servant's entrance is in a city 17 miles away.

Guests arriving in motor cars must go through the dog-houses.

All the plumbing is on the ridge-pole. The tiling on the roof is loose and the beautiful window-boxes are full of geraniums and strangers.

Chairs have scrubbing board backs and rubber legs. Every thing in the home is full of sharp points and angles.

For the first time in criminal annals, a man can get stabbed by architecture.

We hope this modernistic craze will soon be over, for it is driving us nuts.

The guest room entitles you to a soothing sleep on a downy rockpile made of scattered granite.

A modernistic home is supposed to be the last word in bungalows.

And the last word in most bungalows is "Police!"

Vow to Solve Gangster Murder Held as Pledge

It is evident that the slaying of the alleged head of Pittsburgh gang racketeers at the entrance of a North Side hospital Tuesday night has some significance aside from being another in the long list of crimes of terrorism that has shocked the public because they have been "unsolved."

The police now are aroused!

"This is one murder we MUST clean up and which we WILL clean up (the capitals are ours)," Lieut. David Corbett, chief of the homicide squad, is quoted as declaring. And added that it "will end these gang killings once and for all time."

The public will hold that as a promise.

Scores of killings by gang methods have occurred in Pittsburgh in the last few years, and the killers have gone unpunished except as they met death through gangland methods. Many such homicides perhaps have been in reprisal for other murders, and so the whole bloody series has gone on in an endless chain that is one of the effects of winking at bootlegging and its allied industries.

The "racket" is no child's play with those who engage in it. It means millions to them and they consider the sums they pay for "protection" as a grain of sand on the river's edge. But they will not permit a rival to scoop up any of the river of gold that flows into their coffers. That means death, as has been so frequently proven.

But the police are aroused, according to Lieut. Corbett.

The public will hope so. It insists that the reign of crime be ended.

Conditions in Congested Prisons Are Intolerable

That pitiful story from the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kansas, the other day ought to have made every Senator and Representative in Congress blush with shame and his every constituent burn with indignation.

President Hoover has called for an appropriation of $5,000,000 to relieve the congestion in these federal "black holes of Calcutta."

Crazed by the heat and maddened by the overcrowded conditions of the prison its inmates ran amuck. And not until one prisoner had been killed and several others seriously injured was order restored.

For the overcrowding that caused this uprising Congress is chiefly to blame. And the worst of it is that Congress knows all about the intolerable conditions not only at Leavenworth but at Atlanta and in prisons all over the country to which the federal government commits prisoners.

Attorney general after attorney general has begged Congress to take the necessary steps to relieve this inhuman crowding of helpless human beings in jails that are a disgrace to a country that pretends to be civilized.

Finally a special committee of the House made a thorough investigation and reported all the facts to Congress at the last session in ample time for remedial legislation to be enacted before adjournment. But Congress turned a deaf ear to the whole shocking story.

This special committee appointed by the speaker reported to Congress:

That the Leavenworth Penitentiary has within its walls today more than twice the number of prisoners that can be decently housed.

That the normal capacity of the Atlanta Penitentiary is 1,712 and upon the day the committee inspected it there were crowded into that institution 3,107 prisoners.

That in both these institutions it was necessary to place two prisoners in a single cell.

That "men are sleeping in dark, ill-ventilated basements and corridors" and that "the kitchen and mess facilities are overloaded to more than twice their proper capacity."

That no more prisoners should be confined to the McNeil Island Penitentiary in Puget Sound, not only because it has reached its physical capacity but because of its remote location and lack of sufficient fresh water.

That at the Leavenworth Penitentiary most of the prisoners are employed only part of the time.

No better were the conditions which the committee found in the non-federal institutions to which the federal government sends many of its prisoners.

"In some non-federal institutions," says the committee in its report, "especially many county and city jails, the conditions are most deplorable. Many of these jails are congested just as badly as are the federal penitentiaries at Leavenworth and Atlanta and in most of these jails there is no separation of the guilty from the innocent, the sick from the well, the young from the old or the hardened criminals from impressionable first offenders."

Recommendations for relieving these conditions were laid before Congress, but to nearly all of them Congress has thus far turned a deaf ear.

And this intolerable condition is becoming worse all the time. The population of our prisons is increasing 10 per cent per year.

Not until the Congress feels the whip of public indignation can the country expect an end to the disgraceful conditions that drove those poor creatures at Leavenworth the other day to desperation and revolt.

Surely the women of the country will not always be indifferent to this prison problem. Surely the churches of the country have here a responsibiltiy that they have too long neglected.

Surely every right thinking citizen will support the President in his demand that this outrageous blot on our record as a humanitarian people shall be wiped out as soon as possible.

SUN-TELEGRAPH'S PLATFORM

For Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania

1—A better, cleaner, more beautiful city.
2—Rapid transit.
3—Repeal or modification of "blue law."
4—Establishment of Pittsburgh metropolitan district.
5—Community Fund for charities.
6—Town Hall, seating at least 15,000.
7—Voting machines to insure honest elections.
8—Development of river transportation.

THE NEXT STOP---MARS?

THE father of science is imagination. There is hardly a single pioneer in the history of airplanes and dirigibles who does not pay tribute to Jules Verne. Verne, himself, a French scientist, declared he owed his ideas to a master of pure imagination, the American, Edgar Allen Poe, the first to write on balloon flights.

It is fitting that when the greatest airship every built, sets out on the Hearst-Zeppelin-Round-the-World flight it should start from American soil.

The flight will be epochal in the annals of this globe. Who knows but that the dwellers on Mars will give it from time to time an inaudible hail as it becomes visible in the upper strata of the ether? The sight of the vast, luminous cigar bobbing serenely through the ocean of the air, may be the signal for rejoicing on that planet.

They may even be justified in regarding it as an augury of visitors in the future. That is not beyond the limits of science. Fantasy has pushed science almost that far already. The Earth-to-Mars flight is in the tomorrow, however.

Meantime there is much work to be done. The Zeppelin, toiling over the world and gathering ideas as it plows through the air, will be doing honest journeyman toil as useful to science as imagination itself.

Bible Passages

Through Faith in Jesus

(The Acts 3; 1-16.)

NOW Peter and John went up together into the temple at the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour.

And a certain man lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful, to ask alms of them that entered into the temple;

Who seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple asked an alms.

And Peter, fastening his eyes upon him with John, said, Look on us.

And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them.

Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk.

And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up: and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength.

And he leaping up stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God.

And all the people saw him walking and praising God.

And they knew that it was he which sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple: and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him.

And as the lame man which was healed held Peter and John, all the people ran together into them in the porch that is called Solomon's, greatly wondering.

And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people, Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk?

The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son Jesus; whom ye delivered up, and denied him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let him go.

But ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you;

And killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses.

And his name through faith in his name hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know: yea, the faith which is by him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

IT'S hard to take the brass off some of these guys that rent apartments in New York. Lots of 'em don't seem to care whether you take the apartment or not. They know that if you don't somebody else will.

There was a man and his wife being shown around a place with a fancy entrance and marble halls. But when they got into the kitchen of the apartment with the agent, the lady let out a yell.

"There's a mouse!" she says. "And cockroaches! Why, the place is full of mice and cockroaches!"

"Well, lady," says the agent, "you can't expect rabbits and guinea-pigs for ninety dollars a month, can you?"

THE GAS BAG

INFORMATION is gathered at the ear and wasted at the mouth. We find what a man DOESN'T know by LISTENING to him—one can merely GUESS AT his thoughts.

Gabblers are most apt to be garblers—the loudest-squeaking wheel is always out of alignment, too.

Folk who tell the most usually have the LEAST to tell. Chatterers are invariably smatterers—with a stock of unsalable odds and ends on their mental shelves.

There's mighty little to digest in the average conversational "free lunch." People who know WORTHWHILE things likewise know their WORTH, and aren't found scattering pearls of wisdom GRATIS.

The VOLUBLE man is seldom a VALUABLE man. He plays a poor game. He shows all his cards at the flash and immediately exposes his hand.

HE never leads for information. Given the opportunity, he soon exhausts his facts, his listeners and his WELCOME.

His hearer is TIRED out, and he is tried out at ONE sitting. Thereafter, his tale is stale. He can merely review ideas and plans already expressed. He leaves nothing to be expected when he leaves.

He's a nuisance and a bother. He has no conception of the passing or the importance of time.

He obstructs routine, delays schedules, upsets appointments. He departs under a cloud of dislike and carries no RAIN-CHECK.

He abuses the privilege of audience. He runs on until he runs down.

He doesn't comprehend the distinction between the patience of courtesy and actual interest. He locks every door behind him and breaks the key in the lock.

After the Old Man had accepted his "resignation," he sped the parting pest with a few potent sentences of advice.

"My boy," he said, "you remind me of a chap back home named Phineas Philps.

"PHENY once took part in a sprinting match. He outran the whole field, but he didn't watch his course, and so the men behind him were crossing the tape while he was still LOOKING for it.

"That's your trouble. You start before you know where you're headed, and so you aren't certain when you've reached the mark.

"You can't guide yourself any more than one of these talking machines. When you've said your little piece, you keep scratching and scratching until you've spoiled the record.

"You've unsold as MANY customers as you've convinced. For every man you've talked INTO a bill, you've talked another out of a PURCHASE.

"Half the secret of success is locating the point to STOP. The man who can't BRAKE himself never gets the BREAKS."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

MRS. LILIBELLE WILSON can't understand why men are such brutes.

Eight years ago she married Ernest Wilson. It was one of those old fashioned, romantic marriages—apple blossoms, clouds of tulle, fluttering bridesmaids—everything. Lilibelle Jones made a lovely bride, dimpled, soft and pink, and oh, so adoring! So she and her Ernest began life together and everyone said that there was one marriage that was really made in Heaven.

That was eight years ago and now Lilibelle and Ernest are divorced and Lilibelle is having a terrible time getting any alimony at all. And she spends her time asking her friends what she ever did to make Ernest treat her so outrageously.

She was a perfectly wonderful wife, if she does say it herself. She never looked at another man. She was just crazy about Ernest. Yes, maybe she did have a few little teeny weeny bitty faults. Maybe she wasn't very tidy about the house. Maybe she did sometimes lie in bed late of mornings. Maybe meals were irregular. Maybe she did get into debt. But what of it? That was her nature, and if she loved Ernest what did little things like that matter?

Lots of wives did those things. Her own mother had done them to dad. Her mother had been a little lazy and naggy, too, and gotten dad into debt. Sometimes the neighbors had wondered how Old Man Jones could stand it. But dad would just mumble that you "couldn't expect too much of a woman."

Lilibelle, remembering all these things, can't understand how Ernest could have been such a brute. Even if she did have a few little faults they certainly weren't any worse than Ma's and it would never have entered Pa's mind to divorce Ma on account of little things like that.

Lilibelle won't face the fact that things have changed a lot since Ma's day. Pa said you mustn't expect too much from a woman because he honestly believed that women weren't able to put on any better performance than Ma. And there wasn't anything a man could do about it.

BUT WITHIN THE LAST 20 YEARS THE WORLD HAS DISCOVERED THAT PA WAS WRONG.

Women themselves have proven that they CAN put on a better performance than Ma. They've proven that they can be as sensible, reliable and efficient as any man—AND EVERY DAY IN HIS OFFICE, AND IN SCORES OF OTHER OFFICES, ERNEST SEES WOMEN DEMONSTRATING THAT FACT.

Lilibelle thinks that Ernest is "in love with some horrid little stenographer." He isn't. But he is in love with neatness, order, system, self control, common sense. He finds these things in offices—he doesn't find them in the home—and he wants them.

"If the business woman can act like a regular guy, why can't the wife?" is Ernest's very natural query.

It's a query which many modern wives would do well to ponder—AND THEN GET BUSY!

The Rhyming Optimist

Love Understands

SOME there are who pity,
Some there are who chide,
While some others count me
Full of scorn and pride;
Some who call me idle,
Some who think me wrong,
Some who say I barter
All things for a song.

Should I try to tell them
Truths they cannot see?
Could I make them vision
How it is with me?
Better far to leave them
To what views they choose,
If but one, one only,
Faith does not refuse.

Some may say that folly
All my act commands;
But their words weigh lightly
Since Love understands!

Isn't It So?

The emptier the head the easier to fill it with hot air.

Think about your own faults and you will talk less about the faults of others.

If every man was compelled to act as his own fool-killer there would be an epidemic of suicides.

Most people find fault with their neighbors in order to get even with neighbors who find fault with them.

DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—Irvin Cobb in a lyrical mood said of San Francisco: "She is the poppy in California's hair." And that may be why Irvin has not shown up in Los Angeles lately. Rudyard Kipling departing cried: "San Francisco has only one drawback—'tis hard to leave."

Indeed almost every visitor has purred over its charming hospitality—its golden radiance. Yet to me its chief lure is in being itself. Where else, for instance, among such cosmopolitanism could one board a dinky, antiquated cable car and toil so slowly up the ascending cliffs? Clipper ships jostle modern liners in the harbor.

It is the last stand, too, of the beaming and moonfaced Irish cop with the thick brogue and easy-going tolerance. In a quick lunch today was a waitress who insisted upon addressing several ladies in the party as "Dear." There are many such familiar gestures winning to dwellers among the stiff necks.

The hub of the city is the Ferry Building through whose portals thousands pass hourly. Yet there is no elbow-jabbing or shin-kicking. People are not breaking their necks in a mad dash for nowhere. Vehicular as well as pedestrianic traffic moves slowly but steadily.

San Francisco seems fully conscious constant change is not at all necessary for civic as well as living comfort. This is strikingly emphasized by the fact James Rolph has been mayor for more than 20 years. He is rich and does not need the job but loves his city and the city will have no other.

Outside of China, the city has the largest Chinatown in the world. Twenty square blocks near the center of the city bristle with pagoda roofs and are gay with lantern-hung balconies. More than 15,000 Chinese live in this teeming slice of a transported Orient and are Occidentalized down to the latest hair bob and hat dip.

The Chinese shops are not dimlit, smelly and stuffy holes in the wall peculiar to such quarters in most cities. They are expansive, fascinating and bizarre. One may prowl about with no clerk at your elbow urging you to buy. It is not a creepy adventure but a pleasant lark.

Nearly all down town corners are ablaze with little flower stands reminding of the shifting colors of the floral seasons. One may buy an armful of lovely roses for 50 cents.

Many pre-prohibition haunts endearing S. F. to the stranger have vanished but Coffee Dan's still flourishes. It is a cellar cabaret which at midnight attains the din of a boiler factory in full blast. Patrons pound on wooden tables to greet the arrival of every celebrity as he comes down the stair—and there are few celebrities who will miss this welcome. The New York night club custom of giving every arrival "a hand" started at Coffee Dan's, and was not an original Broadway idea as so many suppose.

San Francisco has 1,200 licensed hotels—a greater number for its size than any other city outside New York. An ace spot for those who obey the ad and become-a hotel detective-in-12-lessons.

Similie: As rare as an umbrella in San Francisco in the summer time. (I run that over to myself and it sounded swell but it is certainly a dud in print.)

San Francisco boasts of the most beautiful women in America. It is largely true but not entirely. Such opinions are individualistic anyway. Almost everyone has a city where feminine pulchritude seems incomparable. My choice, as though anyone cares, is Louisville, Ky.

The sun here is caressing but rarely stings. Nobody seems to be tanned and a sunstroke is unknown.

A picturesque throwback to early California days is Mission Dolores, a wistful little adobe structure that has stood for more than 150 years as a romantic reminder that Spain once held this land.

San Francisco is accustomed to visiting writers turning rhetorical handsprings over its miracles and outside of New York no American city has been so novelized. A companion on the buggy ride over, who had never seen the city before, described it enthusiastically with: "She's a jim dandy!" And threw his hat in the air. Well, he had only had a couple.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

HOW about your crowd, are there certain ones in it who appear to be becoming too much interested in the life partners of others?

In your case, are you not finding some man or woman in your set increasingly attractive to you?

And are you allowing yourself to drift this way?

You are sure that nothing will come of this, so you indulge.

Of course you are not interested to the extent of actual wrong.

But how do you explain your greater anxiety to be in the society of this person?

Isn't this an indication that you are treading on dangerous ground?

And do you think that the one who has the one and only claim on you, has not noticed your evident enjoyment when in the presence of this other person?

You can't hide such a matter from an observing person who cares.

And even if there is not a strong feeling for you, pride would cause your life partner to rebel.

Remember that the one who allows you to be attracted is not unaware of your preference and possesses a very small soul to allow it for vanity's sake.

It's easy to take a step which will lead into trouble or dissension in your home.
